

DYNAMITE BLAST KILLS MAN

RESCUE EFFECTED IN MID-OCEAN

STATE ASKS EXTREME PENALTY FOR SMITH; SANITY IN QUESTION

Jury Will Decide Fate
Before Night Friday, Is Said

JEFFERSON, O., July 18.—The evidence against Tibby Smith, 26, accused of conspiring the murder of his 22-year-old wife, Clara, today was to be weighed on the scales of justice by a jury of twelve men.

Before nightfall, the young Ashtabula truckman will probably know whether he must pay with his life for the murder, which the state contends climaxed his ten-day illicit love affair with Mrs. Maude Lowther, 22-year-old quarter-blood Indian girl from the hills of West Virginia.

Jury deliberation on Smith's fate was delayed yesterday while the prosecution paraded several witnesses before the court in an effort to prove that the accused man, despite the defense contention that he is a "feeble-minded moron," is normal in every way.

Final pleas of the defense and the prosecution, the charge of Judge Charles A. Sargent, and the jury's decision are all that remain in the drama of Smith's fight for his life.

Howard M. Nazor, county prosecutor, began his final argument when court convened today. He demanded that the jury return a verdict that will send the young Ashtabula truckman to the electric chair.

The prosecutors' argument was to be followed by that of the defense attorneys, D. F. Dunlacy and C. S. Sheldon.

The defense attorneys planned to base their pleas for mercy on the contention that Smith is "mentally weak," and upon the testimony of eminent alienists that the man did not have the mental ability to plan or carry out such a murder plot as the state charges. A verdict of acquittal, the defense attorneys admit, is not expected.

"We admit that Smith is a menace to society and should be locked up, but we claim that his life should be spared," Sheldon declared. A verdict of second-degree murder, which carries a penalty of life imprisonment, would be considered a victory for the defense, as would a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity. Should the latter verdict be returned, Smith would be ordered confined to the Lima state hospital for the remainder of his life.

HOTEL STRIKE IS STILL IN PROGRESS

CLEVELAND, July 18.—While union waitresses at two other hotels were planned to join the mass in Cleveland's kitchen and dining room hotel employees strike, only a flimsy hope was held today for an early settlement.

Waitresses at Hotel Cleveland and the Hollenden were slated to quit at noon today, making the strike complete at the ten leading Cleveland hotels.

Ralph M. Rowland, president of the National Association of Colored Waiters and Hotel Employees, came to the rescue of hotel managers yesterday when he offered members of his association to replace the strikers. He is alleged to have charged that unions have discriminated against colored hotel employees.

CUYAHOGA COUNTY OFFICIAL IS DEAD

CLEVELAND, O., July 18.—County Clerk George Wallace, 55, who was known as "the champion vote-getter of Cuyahoga County," died in St. Luke's hospital here today from pneumonia, after an illness of more than a week.

Fire Chief George A. Wallace, father of the county clerk, was at his son's bedside when the end came. Wallace's death was regarded as a loss to the Republican party in this county. He had been a member of the county Republican central committee and for twenty-five years was a board member of the Western Reserve Republican Club.

BRIDE IS MISSING

With mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mrs. Helen Edge, 21-year-old bride of Gary, Ind., police are awaiting the recovery of her husband, Edward G. Edge, a druggist, who has been ill with pneumonia, for questioning. Edge has been placed under arrest on suspicion of foul play at the investigation of the young wife's family, and authorities are planning to search sand dunes and stone quarries nearby for some trace of the girl. Edge and his bride are shown here.

CROP PROSPECTS OF YEAR FAIR; SPRING WHEAT PRICES LOW

Quality Of Grain Is High; Fewer Pigs Is Learned

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Crop prospects for this year are fair, but there will be fewer pigs. This announcement was made today by the department of agriculture in its monthly survey of the agricultural situation. Referring to wheat, the survey revealed:

"Wheat harvest is in full swing. The crop has matured early and so far has been out under favorable conditions, barring some interruptions by rains in eastern Kansas and Oklahoma. Threshing returns in the southwest have shown irregular yields. Quality of the grain is high, being generally of good weight and with high protein content. Yields are poor in the Ohio valley.

"Spring wheat has made good average growth to date, though conditions vary as always. Young grain has suffered for lack of rain in eastern Montana and western South Dakota. The same is true also of southern Alberta and Saskatchewan. In Iowa it was damaged by storms. The outcome of the spring wheat crop will depend largely upon weather conditions during the next month.

"The continued low price of wheat is discouraging to the west. Growers are not disposed to hurry their threshing operations nor to sell grain in as heavy volume as usual on the early market. Terminal storage space is still about half filled with old grain.

FALL PROVES FATAL
COLUMBUS, O., July 18.—Having lost his hold in a tree which he was trimming and falling forty feet to the ground, William R. Ramey, 54, is dead here today as the result of a fractured skull.

REVOLUTION TRAIL MARKER CONTRACT AWARDED THURSDAY

Local Markings May Supplement State Sign Posts

That official state marking of the Revolutionary Trail, which passes through Greene County, will start this summer is revealed in the letting of the contract for the markers to the Sewall Studios, Marietta, Thursday.

Seven hundred miles of the trail through thirty-five counties will be marked, and the original contract calls for approximately 300 markers, which will be constructed of a special aluminum alloy, bronze treated and with the lettering in gold relief.

Because of the original request for $250,000 to finance the project was cut down to $50,000 in the appropriation, only one marker designating points of historic interest will be assigned to each county. It is revealed by E. M. Hawes, of the Sewall Studios, who conferred with Dr. W. A. Galloway, president of the Greene County Historical Society, here Friday.

The other markers will simply designate the trail and indicate the intersections, and will be placed at approximate four mile intervals along the trail. These markers show the name plate against a background of Revolutionary War soldiers in relief. The signs will be placed at right angles to the road so that they will always be in the line of vision of the motorists.

Greene County's marker designating points of historic interest will be placed at Old Town, near the point where the Daughters of American Revolution marker shows where Simon Kenton ran the gauntlet. Because only one such marker is available, Dr. Galloway points out that it will be impossible to designate on the single marker, all of the places of historic interest that would attract the tourist in and around Xenia.

According to Mr. Hawes many

BLACKMAIL LETTER IS FIFTH REVEALED

BELLEFONTAINE, O., July 18.—A fifth blackmail letter, assertedly written by the Reverend Frank E. Reddick, former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Huntsville, north of here, was discovered today.

The letter was written to Daniel Plummer, of Bellefontaine, and demanded $5,000 in cash on the threat of Plummer's life. Reddick is in Logan County Jail here awaiting grand jury action on four counts of blackmail.

Plummer's letter was dated Springfield, Ohio, but was postmarked Bellefontaine. The other four letters were written to Frank and Charles Howard, brothers, of Huntsville, members of Reddick's congregation. Reddick is alleged to have threatened the life of Frank and told Charles that harm would come to his small daughter if they did not give him money. In each case the amount demanded was $5,000.

AUTO KILLS WOMAN

CLEVELAND, July 18.—Mrs. Oppenheimer, 66, is dead here today and her husband, Morris Oppenheimer, 76, is near death from injuries which they received late last night when they were struck by an automobile while alighting from a street car.

The driver of the automobile was questioned by police today concerning the accident.

ONE KILLED, MANY HURT WHEN PASSENGER TRAIN IS DERAILED

TRINIDAD, Colo., July 18.—One man was killed, another was critically injured and a score of passengers were bruised and shaken up when Colorado and Southern passenger train number 2, southbound, was derailed, ten miles south of here today.

The wreck, according to railroad officials, was the result of an apparent plot, as a section of rail had been carefully removed from the track. Spikes and an angle bar were withdrawn. Wrenches and tools with which the rail had been taken up were found nearby. The engine overturned the baggage car, toppled over an embankment and broke in tow and one chair car was derailed. The five remaining cars on the train remained upright.

PASSENGER AND CREW TAKEN FROM BURNING VESSEL IN ATLANTIC

North German Lloyd Freighter Sinks 800 Miles
East Of Bermuda; British Ship Makes Thrilling Rescue

NEW YORK, July 18.—Later information received by the local offices of the North German Lloyd Line today confirmed newspaper reports that the freighter Targis, which burned and sank in mid-ocean, was owned by the Roland steamship line, a subsidiary of the North German Lloyd.

Previously officials of the line had said that their only vessel named Targis could not have been in the position where the sinking occurred.

The Targis left Iquique, Chile, on June 25, and was due at Antwerp about July 27. The vessel carried a crew of forty-two and one passenger as supercargo.

LONDON, July 18.—In a dramatic mid-ocean rescue, the sole passenger and forty-two members of the crew of the North German Lloyd freighter Targis were saved from death by a British steamer today when the Targis, burned and sank 800 miles east of Bermuda.

The Targis, a steel vessel of 5,952 tons, ordinarily carries between fourteen and eighteen passengers as supercargo. At the offices of the North German Lloyd line here, however, it was said that only one passenger was aboard in addition to the crew.

The rescue was effected by the British freighter Rangitoto, registered at Auckland, N. Z.

News of the rescue was contained in brief wireless messages from the master of the Rangitoto, which answered the Targis' call for help late last night. The Rangitoto, a freighter of 985 tons gross, found the Targis ablaze, with fire burning fiercely in three of her holds.

Small boats were put out from the Rangitoto, and the single passenger taken aboard the rescue ship.

CHINA REBELS HOLD MISSION PARTY CAPTIVE

Rescue Expedition
Formed By Consuls
Of Two Nations

PEKING, July 18.—Thirty-six Americans and several British missionaries were captured by rebels and are being held in the upper regions of the Min River, it became known here today.

The American and British consuls immediately organized a miniature rescue expedition and left Foochow this morning on a launch flying the American and British colors. They hope not only to secure the release of the latest captives but also to arrange for the return of two British woman missionaries now being held for a ransom of 100,000 Chinese dollars by Communist bands.

Several days ago the British government evacuated all British residents it could reach and Americans were urged to leave the bandit and rebel infested territory as soon as possible. It is believed the raiders caught the large party while the latter was on its way here to escape further molestation.

SERIOUSLY HURT

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 18.—Harry McNeer, 40, New Boston garage owner, was in a critical condition in a hospital here today suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries which he sustained late yesterday when his automobile collided head-on with a street car.

GERMAN REICHSTAG AGAIN DISSOLVED

BERLIN, July 18.—Chancellor Heinrich Brüning dissolved the German Reichstag today immediately after members voted against President Von Hindenburg's financial decree, issued a few days ago.

The vote was 236 against and 221 for the measure.

THESE MIDDIES! THEY'RE AT IT AGAIN!

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 18.—This quaint old capital is again stirred up over the latest escapade of midshipmen at the naval academy.

CHICAGO-LONDON ROMANCE HINTED

Chicago's gold coast is predicting the marriage of Mrs. Dudley Coats, popular figure in London society, and Marshall Field, III, wealthy merchant. Mrs. Coats' husband died of war wounds at the age of 29, and Mrs. Field has been in Reno since May, where it was expected she would file suit for divorce. The Fields have three children, Field and Mrs. Coats are above.

OFFICER, SUSPECT KILLED IN GUN DUEL

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 18.—Private Charles Stewart, of Troop A, Pennsylvania state police, and John Sabol, alleged blackhand, shot each other to death in a gun duel in a cemetery at Monessen, near here today.

The shooting climaxed setting of a trap for Sabol who was shot down while picking up a package of marked money in the cemetery. State police set the trap for Sabol following receipt of a threatening letter by G. F. Wright, Monessen furniture dealer.

GREAT BRITAIN REJECTS PLAN FOR UNITED STATES OF EUROPE

LONDON, July 18.—Great Britain, last to reply to Aristide Briand's proposal for a federated Europe, today sent the French foreign minister's hopes for a "United States of Europe" aglimmering as scribbling the verdict "neither necessary nor desirable" to his project.

Warm approval is expressed for Briand's principles of closer economic cooperation in the reply published this morning, but the opinion is set forth that the desired object could better be obtained within the framework of the League of Nations.

Couching its opposition to Briand's plan in the most diplomatic terms, the British government catalogued its objections to the federation under three main heads: first, that the plan would lead to confusion and rivalry with the League of Nations; second, that there is danger of causing "anxiety or resentment" in other continents, and third, that as a member of the British commonwealth this country has special

BOB RYDER RESIGNS EDITORIAL DESK

COLUMBUS, O., July 18.—Robert O. Ryder, editor-in-chief of the Ohio State Journal, local morning paper, and a nationally-known columnist and editorial writer, today resigned his position with the Journal and announced his retirement from active newspaper work.

Ryder will be succeeded by Jacob A. Meckstroth, former secretary to ex-Governor Donahay, and who has been connected with the Journal since 1913.

CEDARVILLE WATER SYSTEM EMPLOYEE IS EXPLOSION VICTIM

Albert Graham Dies Going To Hospital; Married July 4

Albert Graham, 40, Tiltonsville, O., employed as a crew boss by the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., which is installing a water system at Cedarville, was mortally injured there Friday morning in an explosion of a dynamite charge after he entered a trench to investigate failure of the blast to ignite.

Graham died while on the way to McClellan Hospital here in a McMillan ambulance. The accident occurred on Xenia Ave. at 9:30. The crew of men working in the trench were blasting in being done through solid rock for the purpose of laying the water mains, left it and sought places of safety to avoid the discharge which was set off by electricity fifty feet away.

Graham was with the workmen, and when the blast failed to take place within the customary time, he descended into the trench, which was about twelve feet deep to see if the connection was properly made, despite warning shouts of his companions. The explosion occurred almost immediately after he entered the excavation.

Graham's mangled form was lifted out by fellow workmen and Dr. H. C. Schick, who was called, ordered his removal to the hospital, accompanying him in the ambulance. The injured man died when the ambulance reached a point between Wilberforce and Xenia, but the trip to the hospital was continued.

The body was taken back to Cedarville, and removed to the McMillan funeral home, where it was viewed later in the day by Dr. R. L. Haines, Greene County coroner. Graham was married July 4 to Miss Nina Nestor of Clarksburg, W. Va., at Clarksburg. His bride was prostrated after learning of the accident at the home of Alva Ford where the Grahams have been living. He is survived by a mother and other relatives at Tiltonsville.

Disposition of the body is awaiting the coroner's verdict and word from relatives of the dead man.

Graham had been employed by the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Co. ever since it began the installation of the water system in Cedarville last spring. It has been necessary to blast away the solid rock that underlies part of the village in order to lay the mains on Xenia Ave., and workmen have been engaged in this task for some time.

BANDITS KILL COP, ESCAPE

CHICAGO, July 18.—Two bandits, captured and supposedly disarmed, unexpectedly produced a revolver today, shot and killed one policeman and shot another, perhaps fatally, then escaped.

The policemen, members of a two-man flivver detail, were: John Gulttanane, killed by a bullet through the head;

Anthony Wistort, shot through the abdomen and believed dying. Surprising the bandits in the act of robbing a south side auto sales company, the two officers disarmed them. While waiting for the patrol wagon, one robber suddenly whipped out a revolver and shot both officers. Gulttanane died instantly.

The bandit pair then fled on foot.

SINGER STRICKEN BY APPENDICITIS

CHICAGO, July 18.—Said to be suffering an attack of acute appendicitis, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, known on the European opera stage as Mme. Claire Dux, early today was taken to Presbyterian Hospital here for an emergency operation.

The opera singer was stricken last night while she was attending the opera at Ravinia, near Wilmette, Ill. She was first taken to Evanston Hospital where a diagnosis was made and physicians decided to operate.

Mrs. Swift has an international reputation in the world of opera.

SEEK EMBEZZLER

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., July 18.—Police here today were searching for W. F. Ferrell of Proctorville, Ohio, bookkeeper for the City Ice Delivery Co., of this city, who has been missing since last Wednesday. He was last seen when he left the company's office to make a deposit.

A warrant, charging him with the embezzlement of $1,698, was sworn out yesterday by company officials.

DAD'S GIRL

EDNA
ROBB
WEBSTER

THE STORY OF A GIRL WHO DESERVED TO WIN

CHAPTER 53

She considered a moment. Would that be unfair to Madge and Aunt Jennie? She was sure they would approve, for they both held Don in such high regard. Already, she liked him very much, herself. He reminded her so much of Winfield—she checked her thoughts.

"Very well—if Madge hasn't planned something else," she agreed.

"I'll see that it's canceled, if she has," he laughed, delighted that she had agreed to his plans.

Someone produced a mandolin and some ukuleles and the crowd sang for an hour, everything from "Sweet Adeline" and "Moanin' Low" to "Sunny Side Up" and "Should I?" Don stayed at Clara Dee's side, whispering affectionate remarks between choruses, watched her lovely face as she sang.

He came for her next day, in a high-powered green roadster, and they drove to Smith's Dam at the river, changed to bathing suits at the modest shack which served for a bath house. Clara Dee swam as she danced, gracefully and easily. She could dive as well as Don—did the swan dive and jack-knife perfectly, to his delight and admiration. They raced against the current and drifted down. He won with his strength rather than his greater skill. She was glad that she had learned something during those purposeless years. She had at least learned to be a good sport where pleasure was concerned.

"You are wonderful," he enthused, when they had climbed to the grassy bank to rest. "And you ride don't you?"

"Yes, indeed!" with enthusiasm. "I love to ride!"

"And dance like a professional, play tennis and golf—have your own mount, or did have, speak French better than most people do their own native tongue—come, tell me all about it. You don't know what a pleasure it is to meet a girl like you! Why, do you know that the majority of the girls around here have never been in a lake or river, would drown instantly if they tried to swim and—horrors—to wear a one-piece bathing suit like yours—never!"

She laughed gaily. "Poor things—they miss a lot of life after all, don't they?"

"Yes, but I suppose if they are content—that is happiness. But you see, I've had the good or ill fortune, I don't know which, to taste the variety of life, yet I'm compelled to remain here where my interests are and probably always will be. Not that I couldn't find those very pleasures here. The problem has been someone to share them. I had despaired until—"

He looked at her as if seeking her consent to go on.

She was making a chain of clovers and offered him no encouragement. He moved closer and laid his big brown hand over her two slender white ones.

"Clara Dee—" his voice lowered with earnestness. "You know I've loved you ever since the first moment I saw you. I know I'm not good enough for you—that my life isn't your life—that it isn't fair to ask you to hide away here, but—"

Isn't there some way—perhaps if you would tell me about yourself?"

She felt a sudden desire to make him happy. She pitied him in his loneliness for she knew what it was to be lonely, to be without sympathetic companionship. He was so fine and worthy of what he wanted—but, she could feel other eyes imploring her, commanding her—"There isn't much to tell, Don. My father was a very wealthy man; but when he died, almost a year ago—he left me nothing, for some mysterious reason. And I've earned my own living since." No need to tell him of those terrible months, those heart-rending experiences. He would understand, she knew as probably no one she had ever known, but she couldn't tell him.

"You brave, dear little thing. You don't need to tell me what you have been through. Such an experience would be bad enough for one who had never known luxury. But you!"

"Yes, but I am thankful now for having had the experience. I was never so happy as I am now—"

"Now, Clara Dee? Is it possible that you could care for me?"

"I—why—I don't know, Don. I scarcely know you and you don't know me."

"I believe I do. When kindred souls meet, is it not necessary for them to become acquainted? I love you so that nothing—nothing you have done nor nothing you could ever say or do, could change that."

She marvelled at so beautiful a revelation. This was a love she had never known—the kind she had defended to Ivan—the love that was complete understanding, unquestioning faith, trust and protection—and she could not speak.

He wound the clover chain about her wrists, took them gently in his hands and drew her to her feet. "It's not fair to insist upon your answer now, dear. Indeed, I want you to be very sure about it first. Let's dive once more and dress for supper."

She was glad for the respite. Her mind was a turmoil. Had she never known Winfield—it might be very easy to be sure about Don. She dressed with trembling fingers and walked slowly out to the machine, where he was waiting. He carried the picnic hamper over under the trees and helped her to arrange their supper on a linen cloth spread on the grass.

She exclaimed over the delicacies he had brought. "But you shouldn't have troubled so much for me. Who did all this for you?"

"He beamed with satisfaction. "It wasn't trouble, my dear. Rather a joy. I supplied everything I could from my gardens and my mother provided the rest. You must meet my mother soon. You will love her, I know."

"I haven't a doubt," she agreed. "It must be very wonderful to have a mother."

There was salad and little iced cakes, dainty sandwiches, great luscious tomatoes, crisp radishes, olives, pink-meated cantaloupes, downy yellow peaches iced lemonade in a thermos jug. Their strenuous exercise had given them both a hearty appetite and they ate in contented silence for awhile. Don was stretched on the grass beside her, his head supported with his left hand while he ate with the right.

"Shall we ride, early in the morning?" he asked.

"Delightful. But where shall I get a horse?"

"I don't think Tom has one that would be suitable," he considered, "but I'll bring my saddle horse for you and ride one of our work horses, myself."

"Oh, no—that would be no pleasure for you!"

"My dear, anything with you would be a pleasure—whether conditions were ideal or not." His eyes probed hers. "Is there some one else?" he asked with fear. When she did not instantly deny it, he exclaimed, "There can't be!"

How could she tell him that her heart was somewhere in the wilds of Canada, perhaps, with a say-eyed youth who stood alone in hip-boots in some swift stream, fishing for trout—that except for a cruel trick of fate, she should be there beside him "hand in hand." She couldn't. But what of her life? Must she always be lonely because she had sent him away forever? If this man did love her, if she could make him happy, even if not with complete re-creation—would it be fair to him? He was offering her everything—a precious devotion—

"Oh, Don! tell me why life is so complicated," was all she said.

A shadow crossed his tanned face. "We all ask that question at some time in our lives; it has been asked for centuries—yet not one has ever found the answer for it. I suppose many of us complicate our own lives. There seems usually to be an inevitable fate for each of us, yet to a certain extent, we are masters of our own destinies."

"It seems to me that we are for the most part masters of our own lives, except in the matter of love; and that is of such supreme importance. You say you have waited for me through the years—I've come—but Don, I don't love you. I don't believe I ever could—and I like you very much."

"I shan't accept that for your answer, Clara Dee—you don't know yet. You can't. You see, you were not prepared for me, while I have been waiting for you, I know with- out your telling me, that there have been others before me. Which only makes it the more bewildering for you. It matters not to me who the others were—if only you can love me some day," he took her hand and kissed it tenderly, reverently.

CHILD WELFARE PROGRAM PRESENTED BY W. C. T. U.

Forty members of McClellan W. C. T. U. were present at the meeting of the union held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Earl Soward, Lower Bellbrook Pike. The devotional service was in charge of Mrs. Effie Tindall, who read the 121st Psalm. A short business meeting followed at which Mrs. Hazel Manor, president, presided. The union is sending a friendship chest to the Philippine Islands and members brought their gifts for the chest to Thursday's meeting. Mrs. Tindall, county director of the child welfare department, had charge of the white ribbon service at which time white ribbons were tied on three small children. The subject for the afternoon's program was "Child Welfare" and was in charge of Mrs. Cora Fawcett and Mrs. Mary Devoe.

A short musical program was also enjoyed by the members during the afternoon and consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Lorena Dean, accompanied by Mrs. Ray Fudge; two readings by Miss Jean Conklin, a violin solo by Miss Helen Hess and a piano solo by Thelma Fawcett. The meeting closed by members singing the Temperance Doxology. A cooling refreshment course was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Jasper Armstrong and Mrs. Kenneth Soward.

YOUNG XENIA COUPLE MARRIED IN KENTUCKY.

Announcement is being made of the marriage of Miss Winifred Cross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cross, Hill St., to Mr. Paul Combs, which took place in Covington, Ky., Sunday, July 13. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Clark, at the M. E. parsonage in that city.

The young couple was attended by Miss Helen Chambliss and Mr. Joseph Haverstick, this city. The bride wore a frock of flowered chiffon and other accessories to harmonize.

Mrs. Combs is a graduate of Central High School with the class of 1929 and is employed in the beauty department at Jobe's. Mr. Combs is the son of Mrs. Johanna Combs, W. Church St., and is a graduate of St. Bridget High School with the class of 1928. He is employed at Fletcher's Grocery.

For the present the couple is residing with the bride's parents, but will later go to housekeeping, their future plans not yet being definite.

PLAYLET ENTERTAINS MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Members of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church, Yellow Springs, enjoyed a very unique program Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. N. Wolford.

A missionary play, "Friendship Dolls," was presented by a group of girls, under the direction of Miss Katherine Fittz. Miss Fittz, the daughter of Mayor and Mrs. D. H. Fittz, is a student at the Schuster-Martin School of Dramatics at Cincinnati and is at present on a vacation at her home. Miss Fittz showed remarkable ability in directing the play, which was greatly enjoyed by the forty guests present. Miss Fittz entertained the guests with two readings at the close of the playlet.

A social hour followed the program and a cooling refreshment course was served by Mrs. Wolford.

W. H. O. CLASS MEETS

Members of the W. H. O. Bible Class of the United Brethren Church, met at the home of Mrs. A. B. Fehlman, S. Monroe St., Thursday evening for the regular July meeting. A short business session was held, followed by a social hour, when refreshments were served to thirty-two guests.

The August meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles, Upper Bellbrook Pike.

Members of the choir of the First Presbyterian Church will meet Friday evening to prepare for special music for the communion services next Sunday morning. Mrs. H. C. Armstrong, choir director, who has been spending several weeks in California with her daughter, Mrs. Percy Minshall, is expected to return to Xenia this week in time to resume her work Friday evening.

Mrs. T. E. Cummings, who has been ill for some time, is slowly improving at her home on W. Main St.

The Junior Missionary Society of the Second United Presbyterian Church will meet at the church Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A full attendance is desired at the meeting.

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary will hold their regular meeting Monday evening July 21, at 7:30 o'clock. A large attendance is desired as important business is to be transacted.

The picnic which was to have been held by members of the Victor's Class, Trinity M. E. Church, has been postponed a week from Monday, July 21 to July 28.

Miss Virginia Johnston, Auburn, N. Y., is the guest this week of Miss Barbara Little, N. King St. Miss Little is entertaining a number of friends at a luncheon-bridge Saturday in honor of her guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Purdom and son have returned to their home in Fort Wayne, Ind. after spending several days with relatives in Xenia and Cedarville. Mr. Purdom is road foreman of engines for the Pennsylvania Railroad at Fort Wayne.

Miss Irene Parrett, W. Third St., returned home Thursday after spending several days in Cincinnati as a guest at a house-party at the home of Mrs. H. L. Thompson, Hyde Park.

Mrs. John R. Beacham and son, John Charles, Hill St., arrived home Tuesday after spending two weeks in the East. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Merchant, former Xenians, at Mt. Pocano, Pa., and also spent several days in New York City.

STOP "CODDLING" CRIMINALS ADVICE OF EX-POLICEMAN

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—Abolish prison reformers; silence "sob sisters"; hang murderers; make prison life "tough" and "Treat a crook like a scoundrel, for that's all he is or ever will be."

That, in a nutshell, is Duncan Matheson's idea of deterring crime in America, and Matheson, now city treasurer of San Francisco, speaks from a background of thirty years on the police force here, thirteen of which he was chief of detectives.

"These social workers and other amateur prison reformers have the wrong slant on the crook," Matheson said today. "He isn't a misfit in society. He's a downright scoundrel and no brain operation or educational program will ever correct him."

"What will correct him, is a short, sharp prison sentence in a prison that is a prison instead of a rest camp. Feed him well and house him warmly in sanitary surroundings. Then make him work like fury and deny him all luxuries like tobacco, sweets, newspapers, radios, shows and baseball games. He won't like that and will try to stay out of prison in the future."

Matheson claims he never saw a crook who was a medical case "except those with diabetes or gout from rich prison fare" and that the insanity law is just a ruse to open the doors to asylums from which escape is easy.

He likes Canadian methods. "One time I saw an American crook on the street in Ontario," he said. "I asked him how he was."

"Awful," answered the crook. "I just got through serving two years and ten months of a three year sentence for blowing safes. And what I mean, I served them. I'm getting back to the good old United States as fast as I can. No more of the Canadian prisons."

"That same crook here," added Matheson, "would have got a long sentence, served just a small part of it in pleasant surroundings, and would have gone right back to safe cracking. Our prisons are no deterrents."

And as for capital punishment, it prevents murders. Our life sentences mean about thirteen years as a rule because of pardons, paroles and time off. Then these killers are thrown back on society.

"Going back to Canada again, I know of two criminals there who waited until a man got into the United States to kill him. They hang 'em too quick in Canada to take a chance," one of them told me."

ASKS $18,400

Jean Acker, film and vaudeville actress, better known as the first wife of the late Rudolph Valentino, has brought suit in New York City to compel William Delehan, realty promoter and politician to pay her $18,400 a year for the rest of her life. His accuser alleges breach of financial contract under which Delehan promised to pay her that amount after she left the movies in 1925.

YOUTH UNHURT IN SUICIDE ATTEMPT

COLUMBUS, O., July 18.—An unidentified youth who escaped unharmed yesterday after he had attempted suicide by flinging himself in front of an oncoming street car, today was being held in city prison for mental observation.

The youth, who was caught on the fender of the car and merely rolled along the track until the trolley could be halted, refused to give his name or to talk. Police did get him to say that his age is 22. Authorities, who will give the young man a mental test today, believe that he may be suffering from a lapse of memory. Parts of the youth's clothing bear Cleveland trademarks.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

LEGAL LIGHT—If any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.—Matthew 5:40, 41.

THE SUPERLATIVE AGE

Glibly using the expression "super-salesman" the other day, we were struck anew with the realization that this popular and typically American prefix is simply a contraction of "superlative." The dictionary tells us that "superlative" is "Raised to or occupying the highest pitch, position or degree; most eminent; surpassing all other; extreme; as, a man of superlative wisdom."

It might be well for the national soul if we stopped some of the egotistical insistence on the superlative quality of our men and our machines. Admittedly we are good; but are we so good that we honestly surpass everyone else in everything? We should remind ourselves that "Pride goeth before a fall," and that to characterize our products with "superlative" is to exhibit a pride which has already tended toward extravagant exaggeration.

This is the tourist season. Many of our citizens have gone abroad, bearing with them that consciousness of superiority which has subjected Americans to no little criticism. If we were really as superlative in many qualities of the spirit as we acknowledge ourselves to be in commerce and industry, we might give proof of this by our supreme courtesy and consideration for the rights of others, thereby avoiding the charge that Americans are blatant, boastful, ruthless, disrespectful and many other adjectives far removed from the superlative in its flattering sense. We do not believe in false humility; but there is a proper pride which expresses itself in a decent respect for ourselves and for others.

The whole point is that our application of the abbreviation "super" has been entirely material, without extending it to those spiritual excellences implied in the meaning of the word, over which we have a tendency to be self-conscious, and so to underrate.

COOLING DOWN

There is practical sanity in the assurance that the French government will lay down no new ships of war for the next six months which Paris has conveyed to Rome. The action is plainly a bid for a maintenance of the status quo during a period set aside for the operation of a cooling down process. It is an inferential if not direct expression of hope that at the end of a half year the feelings of irritation in France and Italy will have subsided sufficiently to permit a resumption of the conversations regarding naval limitation which were broken off almost peremptorily a few weeks ago, and were succeeded by a time of tension in which war talk became common conversation.

M. Briand is quite explicit and frank on the point. He has told the chamber of deputies that war in Europe just now is neither possible nor admissible. He has declared that by keeping calm France does not lessen its reputation, but improves its strength and its desire for peace; and he has expressed a belief that before the end of 1930 the misunderstandings between the French government and Mussolini can be ironed out, and ground for an arrangement regarding both the naval issue and the differences over Tripoli and Tunisia, found.

M. Briand is, of course, the professional pacifier of France and his words generally are highly optimistic when he gets started on his theme. None the less he is at present in a strategic position with respect to the policies of his country, and if he is left to manage affairs it is possible that he may be able to arrange some modus vivendi which will avoid the clash in the Mediterranean that a good many people seem to think must come.

Every little while some news comes out of Buncombe county, North Carolina. The latest report is that more than 3,000,000 honey bees have died from feasting on moonshine mash, which makes them so drunk that, unable to fly home, they starve to death or freeze. The item also says that prohibition enforcement officers use bees as unofficial bloodhounds for trailing stills. Well, we warned you that this came from Buncombe county.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

NOTHING FINAL

Scientists not long ago took a photograph of an electron, the smallest particle of matter, enlarged it, studied it. They were the first to have a look at the smallest unit of matter. But science doesn't aim at finality. It aims only at truth. What seems truth today may prove tomorrow to be inaccurate. The electron is the smallest thing today. Later it may not be the smallest thing. Let's never be boastful about our achievements. Think rather that tomorrow we may do better.

A NEW FORCE

Many of us make the mistake of thinking we can deliberately put something out of our mind and not put anything in to take its place. That's not the way to proceed. It can't be done. If you want to clear unhealthy, unhappy thoughts out of your mind you have to replace them definitely with something else. The mind in waking hours cannot be inactive. It is not made that way. Give the mind good food and it builds body and character. Just trying to keep it empty is no use. It won't work that way. There are plenty of definite, constructive things to think about. Plenty of food for the mind.

SMOKE TALK

Today more cigarettes are smoked by women than were smoked by both men and women ten years ago. Not that this is very important, but it is another indication that human customs are no exception to the rule that everything changes and most things change fast. Ten years from now we may have new statistics that will astonish vastly more than these.

THE EASY TRUTH

If politicians only knew how much time and trouble and worry they could save themselves by simply telling the truth, more of them might adopt the policy. The truth is often the easiest possible way out of the greatest difficulties.

DON'T WANT ENFORCEMENT

Speaking of prohibition, and almost everybody is speaking of it, Maryland never had an enforcement law. New York, Wisconsin, Montana and Nevada repealed their enforcement acts. In the fall Massachusetts will have a vote of the people to decide whether they will repeal their law which provides for state enforcement. It will probably carry. Massachusetts is pretty wet. That will make six states whose people, by majority rule, say they don't want the Volstead law enforced. When people go on record to the effect that they do not wish a law enforced it is time to have a serious examination of the law they are officially deciding to ignore. Nobody can blame President Hoover for wanting his crime commission to do a thorough job of investigation.

THE QUESTION BOX

CENTRAL PRESS WASHINGTON BUREAU

Answers to questions of information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington D. C., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions.

What is the meaning of a five-leafed clover? Are they found often?

The only real significance of a five-leafed clover is that nature is trying an experiment. If the extra leaves prove of value to the clover, a five-leafed species might develop. In some regions the five-leafed plant is considered especially lucky, while in others it is considered of evil significance to the finder. Five-leafed clover is much rarer than the four-leafed variety.

Memorial Coins

Was the proposal to issue a 50-cent piece commemorating the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony passed by congress?

No. About 50 proposals for special issues of coinage were abandoned following President Hoover's pronouncement against this type of coinage.

Aurora Borealis

Does the Aurora Borealis occur at any particular time of the year? The Aurora Borealis, more commonly termed "the northern lights," may occur at almost any time of the year, but is most often seen in October and in April. It is seldom seen in the summer or in the middle of the winter.

War Is Hell

Did Sherman actually utter the expression, "War is hell?" The expression is attributed to General Sherman, although it was not remembered by him. John Koolbeck, of Harlem, Iowa, who was aide-de-camp to General Winslow, testified that after the Battle of Vicksburg General Sherman was watching the crossing of the army over a pontoon bridge and he (John Koolbeck) distinctly heard Sherman say, "War is hell."

Automobile Bermuda

Are automobiles permitted in Bermuda? Automobiles are not permitted in Bermuda because the people desire their island to remain free from the traffic congestion and noises that go with automobiles.

Making Money

Who prints all the paper money of the United States? The Bureau of Printing and Engraving of the treasury department manufactures all paper money of the government, all stamps, including revenue stamps, all official checks, drafts, warrants, commissions, certificates, transportation requests, and liquor permits. There are 4,920 employees who work in the bureau turning out more than 400,000,000 sheets of paper money a year.

(NOTE: The following pamphlets may be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope for each, to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. C.: "Who in Hollywood," "Swimming," "Seeing Washington," and Charles P. Stewart's treatise on "Our Government.")

STATISTICS NEW YORK CITY, New York. — Among 4,400 claims recently analyzed by a New York accident insurance company, 307 were the result of baseball mishaps. Three of the 4,400 were damaged playing ping pong. More than a hundred were scarred by fireworks. Swimming and bathing followed baseball in relative danger, with wrestling, and "friendly scuffling" next. Boating, skating and tennis followed in the order named.

No mention was made of the greatest of all outdoor sports: Arguing with Traffic Congestion, or the leading indoor amusements: Opening Car Windows for Petty Girls, and Skidding on the Procter and Gamble in the Bathroom.

TITLE Coward McCann, publishers, announce a forthcoming volume—their first Buck-and-a-Half novel entitled "Sinners in Summer-time."

According to Floyd Dell (everybody knows who Floyd Dell is, or blushes for not knowing), the book is "an astonishing blend of Hans Christian Andersen and Henrik Ibsen."

A blend of that type, naturally would be astonishing. And Hans Christian Andersen would be submerged, while Henrik Ibsen would be as all-pervading as a hunk of wop cheese in the family ice chest. The Duchess, however, disagrees with me. She says she thinks the title, "Sinners in Summer-time," is delightfully provocative, and she's thinking of getting a copy.

And there you are! What's the use of being clever and analytical and epigrammatic, with a woman like that around the place?

STILL THE GREAT MYSTERY

SENATORS WITH SUPERIOR ATTITUDE INCLINING TOWARD SECRET POLICIES ARE NOT SO PLENTIFUL THESE DAYS

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Unless the average citizen is willing to admit he is too much of a chump to be trusted with full information concerning his own affairs, let him butt in mischievously, it is hard to understand how he can meekly accept the view of statesmen like Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania that the more secretly public business is transacted the better it is all around.

That most folk are boneheads, who ought to let the intelligent few run their government for them, is a doctrine, to be sure, which has been in vogue since the beginning of time. But in this generation? I wouldn't have supposed so.

In fact, I question if the pooh, pooh attitude still assumed toward the populace by a few present-day politicians is a safe policy even for the David A. Reedian type of them, who have stuck to it thus far.

There are not so many of them as there used to be. Reed is left, and Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, and Senators Arthur E. Gould of Maine and "Old Joe" Grundy of Pennsylvania, like Reed—but Gould is just retiring, and Grundy, as we know, was beaten for renomination in May.

In the next congress Reed and Bingham will be about the only survivors of the "truly superior" breed of senators.

There are others who are quite as ultra-conservative as Reed and Bingham, or Gould and Grundy. For example, Senators Smoot of Utah, Metcalf of Rhode Island, Moses of New Hampshire, Phipps of Colorado. No one ever was more conservative than Senator Smoot. Probably he is more so than Senator Reed. But these senators are not so exalted as Reed and Bingham. Though conservative, they put no airs; a great gift is not fixed between them and the hoi polloi.

It must be conceded that Pennsylvania is not a commonwealth where popularity with the voters signifies as much at the primaries as it does in the United States, undertaken to revive his understanding of America.

According to Ted, there ain't no hope for the country. It's on its way to the demitition bows-ows. Constitutional government has abdicated, literachore is practically dead and Big Business has turned all of us into "trudging asses."

When I was a kid an' got in that frame of mind, Maw used to dose me with sulphur and molasses. There's only one sovereign remedy for pessimism.

AS IN RADISH. Al Smith, speaking at a dinner the other evening made mention of the criticism that his pronunciation of the word "radio" had engendered. At first, he said, he felt pretty badly about it, and almost deserted "rad-io" for "raid-io."

"But just in the nick of time," he laughed, along to my rescue came a professor of English at Harvard who assured me I was right and that the 'a' in 'radio' was pronounced like the 'a' in 'radish.' That made me feel pretty good, and I still pronounce it in the campaign way."

At all good Democrats likewise call it "rad-io."

While all loyal Republicans say "raid-io."

Next: "Dust on the Dining Room Table."

and on election days as in most states.

If a candidate is right with the organization, in Pennsylvania, presumably he wins, regardless of the electorate's ideas.

However, even Pennsylvania seems to be changing.

Senator George Wharton Pepper, who was Reed's Pennsylvania senate-mate for awhile, was as superior a senator as Reed himself—but Pepper was beaten for renomination. And for this reason—"He was too superior" as a Keystone State congressman whispered into my ear at the time. There may have been other reasons, too, but that one was beginning to count even then—in 1926.

Only this spring Senator Old Joe Grundy likewise fell a victim to his superiority. True, he did get into the senate, but that was by appointment; not by popular acclaim. His superiority was of a different sort from Reed's or Pepper's, but it was of the thoroughly contemptuous sort—contemptuous of popularity.

And bingo! he went on primary day.

In place of him, already nominated and with his election twice as good as clinched next November, we have one of the least superior candidates between the oceans—James J. Davis, our superlatively popular secretary of labor for two and a fraction presidential terms.

All of which seems to hint that superiority is not the asset that it was, even in Pennsylvania—that vote-getting qualities are in the ascendant even there.

Once a candidate is nominated, the difference may not signify, but it's sufficient if it signifies adequately in the primaries.

Moreover, one hears Pennsylvania politicians wondering, "What of Dave Reed's chances in 1934?" It's looking good way ahead, but Pennsylvania politicians are remarkably farsighted. They can see things over the horizon that another person never would suspect were there.

What calls Senator Reed's superiority to mind is his attitude in connection with the senate argument over ratification of the London naval treaty.

Certain secret correspondence has been mentioned as having figured in the negotiations preliminary to this pact's conclusion.

Senator Reed, as one of the negotiators, has wanted it kept secret all along. He always does want such things kept confidential. He fought public senate sessions on the confirmation of appointments. He wants committee meetings held behind closed doors. It always makes trouble for ordinary folk to know what their government is doing, he argues—until after it is finished, then it can be announced to them as what diplomats call "un fait accompli," meaning "an accomplished fact," for the benefit of those who are not so extra superior.

A piano requires tuning at least once in two or three months to keep it in good shape, oftener if it is in constant use. This for the good of the instrument as well as the human ear. In dusting the piano inside, the vacuum attachment may be run lightly over the wires and it will suck up all dust from the wires, hammers and webbing. In cleaning the keys, wring a soft flannel cloth out of toilet alcohol and rub them lightly, then polish with a bit of dry flannel. Do not wet the wooden portions of the keys. Fine furniture polish will keep the case clean and bright, used on a soft cloth and polished with a dry, soft cloth. In damp climate, or in rainy seasons, sometimes a "bloom" or cloudiness forms over the case that the polish does not always remove, and we are forced to try other means. One effective remedy is to mix a half cup of clear turpentine with a cup of water and a half teaspoon of toilet alcohol. Go over the surface with this mixture on a soft cloth, then go over with a dry, soft cotton flannel cloth, or a new piece of soft chambray.

Safety Can After the garbage can has served its purpose, do not throw it away, but make it serve as a receptacle outdoors for burning waste paper and dried leaves. This prevents it from scattering and serves as a protection.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS By MRS. MARY MORTON

Care of Piano

A piano needs understanding care. It must not be placed in a sunny window or the rays will crack the finish. If the house is damp the piano should be kept closed when not in use and a small piece of charcoal laid inside the case. If there are moths about, a piece of camphor gum should be placed in the case. Traps should be set if there are mice in the house, for they are fond of nesting in the upright piano.

Asparagus Stands Low In Calories

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"How does asparagus stand in value as a food?"

It stands high, Miss I., especially for those who want to reduce, because it is bulky and watery and contains very few calories. You can have a pound of it for 100 C. (That's about 20 medium sized stalks.) But, while it is low in calories, it is high in vitamin B, the anti-neurotic vitamin, and the green asparagus is relatively high in the growth and mucous membrane protecting vitamin A.

Asparagus also has mineral salts common to the other vegetables and like the other vegetables its salts are alkaline in their final reaction, so it is a basic food and thus helps to keep the normal slight alkalinity of the blood and tissue fluids, and helps to prevent an acidosis which may come from having too much of the acid-ash foods in the diet. In general, the acid-ash foods are flesh foods, cereals, eggs; while the alkaline ash foods are the fruits, vegetables, milk and nuts.

When fresh asparagus is not available, the canned is a very good substitute. The modern methods of canning cause very little loss of vitamins and mineral elements.

There is a volatile oil in asparagus which is absorbed and eliminated by the kidneys. You know of its presence, but it is not irritating, so don't be frightened. In fact, asparagus, being an alkaline food, helps keep the urine less acid.

Asparagus should be steamed rather than boiled; then none of its nutritive value is dissolved by the boiling water. And try the tender, fresh asparagus in salads, raw. It is delicious. (We should eat more of our vegetables raw. A lot of them that are usually cooked are nice raw, especially if grated.)

I have read that 90 per cent of the United States asparagus supply is furnished by California, and it is the San Joaquin river delta with the Sacramento lowlands adjoining, that furnishes most of this 90 per cent. This delta is ideal for asparagus, as well as other vegetables, because of the deposits of vegetable matter and concentrated silt from the river into the water flowing from the Sierra across the great valley to the sea.

"What is sediment in the lungs? Can it be cured? What causes it and will it or can it cause tuberculosis?"

Workers in coal mines, stone drilling, sand, etc., get more of the dust of these materials in their lungs. I presume that is what you mean by "sediment." It becomes incorporated into the tissues and once it is there, it is there for good, like tattooing. Methods are now being used to protect workers from inhaling these dusts.

Every person gets more or less snot in his lungs, especially those who live in the city. Yes, workers in dust of any kind have their lung tissue resists lowered to tuberculosis and other lung infections such as pneumonia.

For those who are interested, we have an article on Tuberculosis, which gives a list of books written by authorities for the laymen.

Editor's Note: Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, plus the following small charge to help cover cost of printing and handling: for each article wanted, two cents in coin; for each pamphlet, 10 cents in coin. The pamphlets are Reduced and Gaining, Hygiene of Women, The Urinary System. Address: Dr. Peters Bureau, in care of this paper. Write legibly, and not over 300 words.

Saves Lips For Youth She Loves By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

HERE'S A BIT of advice to discontented little girls from a contented one.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been a reader of your column for quite a while, and surely do enjoy it. I am not coming to you for advice this time, but lots of folks may think I need it rather badly."

"I live in the country and pride myself on being a good sport. I have the dearest parents on earth. Some of those little 16-year-old kids who think their parents hate them must remember that all parents must work so hard making a living for the kids that they have forgotten how to show their affections. Just you kids get sick once and see if the won't do anything in the world for you. Mine will."

"They are pretty strict, though. I have never had a date, but that was my fault, as I made a promise to my parents two years ago that I would not go with boys until I was 16. I have many wonderful times as far as that goes."

"Tell George, Jr., I am going to develop into an adorable unmissable girl. I aim to have my lips for the man I can love, honor and obey. Hoping to see this letter in print to help some other little girls bear their troubles, and also wishing Miss Lee all the good luck in the world."

"LAUGHING BLUE EYES"

Thank you very much, dear, for your good advice and your good wishes. You see I did print most of it. George, Jr., seems to be getting a lot of attention, doesn't he?

"MISS VIRGINIA LEE: If you will permit me I would like to say a few words to your reader who signs himself 'Not a Sissy, but a Real Fel'ow.'"

"Where do married men get the idea that every single girl that lays eyes on them is in love with them? You say, if there were no single girls there would be no unfaithful husbands, or, in other words, if there were no sin in the world there would be no sinners. I have also been a constant reader of Virginia Lee's column, and have read just as many articles which married men are making love to some other man's wife as I have read of single girls knocking married men down and dragging them by the hair to caves."

"I have not been in close contact with both married and single men in the business world for seven years without knowing something about them, for if you ever know a man's real self it is at his work."

"Thank you, Miss Lee."

I think you are doing the "Real Fellow" an injustice, Winnie, by mistaking his attitude. And he wasn't married, as I remember. However, I agree with you that men and women are equally to blame in this philandering business, and that married men can't hide behind the skirts of one single girl and excuse their own shortcomings thus.

LONGESOME SALLY: It does seem to me, Sally, that your boy friend is really undesirable. A boy who lies and accepts money from his girl friend and at the same time is not true to her, would hardly make a good husband. I would advise quitting him.

"MISS VIRGINIA LEE: I have a very oily skin. Some of my friends advise me to use a cream to cleanse my face. Others tell me that hot water, soap, and a complexion brush are more effective in cleansing an oily skin. Which cleansing method would you advise me to use?"

"ALMA D."

Blackheads accumulate more quickly on an excessively oily skin. Therefore, it is necessary that you employ a vigorous cleansing method, in order to remove the fatty obstructions that tend to clog the pores. Bland soap and water are generally the most effective in removing the grease and dust from an oily skin. The alkalinity of the soap is an advantage, as it helps to check the oiliness of the skin. The use of a complexion brush is too harsh a measure for the sensitive skin of the face. If the skin is abused and treated roughly, it grows thick and calloused to protect itself. A complexion brush should not be used on the face except when prescribed by a dermatologist. Hot water also is too harsh a treatment for the face. If you steam and scald the muscle fibres of your face with hot water, they will grow lax and flabby. Soft, tepid water, a rough face cloth, and a fine, bland soap are most beneficial in cleansing your type of skin.

"Dear Miss Glad: I have put into practice the instructions on makeup contained in your 'Beauty Culture' booklet and am glad to say that my appearance has improved immensely. However, are there any rules to be followed in choosing the shade of lipstick one should use? I can't seem to find a shade that looks natural on my lips."

DORA JAYNES."

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlet on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

XENIA CHURCH WILL ENTERTAIN MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN 1931

The First United Presbyterian Church, Xenia, will entertain the Junior missionary society of Xenia Presbyterian at its annual rally in September, 1931. This was decided Thursday when the annual rally took place at the Second U. P. Church in Springfield.

One hundred and twelve children were in attendance. They represented congregations in Xenia, Dayton, Columbus, Springfield, Cincinnati, Jamestown, Clifton, Reynoldsburg and other places included in the Presbyterian district.

Speakers for the day were the Rev. W. T. Mahon, pastor of the hostess church and Mrs. E. D. McCune of Bellefontaine, wife of a former pastor. Mrs. W. C. McCleary of New California, junior superintendent for the Presbyterian, was in charge of the rally and after the opening devotionals, a Miss Sarah J. Reid acted as chairman for the hostess church.

A spelling match took place, which was won by Glendon Fox of the entertaining church. This served as an acquaintance maker for the young folks attending. Special music was rendered by the junior choir of the First U. P. Church, Springfield. The Rev. Mr. Mahon gave a talk on the subject, "God in Nature" at the morning session, and Mrs. McCune spoke on "Missionary Methods."

A short business meeting and devotionals took place at noon following a picnic luncheon, each society giving an account of its year's work. Memory work in the form of Bible quotations and missionary stories was given by delegates from the Jamestown church.

In the afternoon, Mrs. McCune's subject was "A Trip Around the World." A feature of the afternoon meeting was a missionary playlet entitled, "How Our Dollies Came to Go as Missionaries" which was presented by young folks from the Second Church, Xenia. An instrumental duet was rendered by Glendon and Gail Fox of Springfield. The final event on the program was a playlet "America for Americans."

AWARDED JUDGMENT FOR AUTO ACCIDENT HERE; COURT NEWS

Charles A. Montgomery, N. Galway St., Pennsylvania Railroad freight conductor was awarded a verdict for $66.99 by a jury in common pleas court Thursday in a $350 damage suit against Dr. F. E. Rosnagle of London. Nine of the jurors signed the verdict. The suit followed an automobile collision at Second and Detroit Sts. last December 29. Dr. Rosnagle's car was being driven east on Second St. and crashed in the Montgomery machine which was traveling north on Detroit St. The Montgomery car was knocked against a boulevard light pole at the northeast corner breaking the light globe and bending the post. The car was badly damaged. It was alleged that the Rosnagle car failed to stop before crossing the intersection.

CLAIM ALLOWED
Judge S. C. Wright allowed Samuel F. Andrews, Jamestown Pike, $1,660 on his $1,900 claim against the estate of his mother the late Mrs. Mary Andrews, for services rendered her during a period of more than three years immediately preceding her death. The claim was contested by other heirs, and the hearing occupied a day and a half in probate court. Samuel Andrews is executor of his mother's will.

Cherry, executors of the will of Emma M. Magruder, were authorized by the court to make distribution in kind of certain assets of the estate.

NO TAX DUE
The court found no inheritance tax is due from the estates of Lena Jenks Martindale and Jessie M. Long. Net value of the former estate was $1,492 and of the latter, $1,305.65.

PASSENGER, CREW TAKEN FROM BURNING VESSEL IN ATLANTIC

ship. The crew remained aboard the burning liner in an effort to extinguish the flames.

For several hours the crew of the Targis worked to save their vessel, wireless messages revealed, while the midnight sky was lit for miles around by flickering glare of the burning cargo.

When at length the blaze became hopelessly out of control, the captain of the Targis abandoned efforts to save his ship, and the crew took to the boats. They were taken aboard the Rangitoto which continued to stand by until the Targis, gutted by the flames from stem to stern, finally slipped beneath the waves.

The captain of the Rangitoto then reported to his head offices that the Targis had sunk, that the passengers and crew had been rescued safely, and that he was proceeding to Southampton immediately. The vessel is due at that port on July 24.

The terse and characteristic wireless reports from the master of the Rangitoto failed to reveal the cause of the Targis' blaze. Both ships were equipped with wireless, but news of the Targis' difficulty was not received until hours after the fire had broken out in her hold, endangering the crew and the passenger who had shipped as supercargo.

While the freighter caught fire in a busy steamer lane, the Rangitoto apparently was the only vessel sufficiently near to respond to her frantic appeals for assistance. When the British vessel reached the scene the fire had gained such headway that there appeared little hope of saving the Targis, but the crew, true to the traditions of the sea, refused to give up the ship until every last chance of saving her had been exhausted.

The Targis, which plies with freight between the United States and Germany, was journeying eastward when the fire broke out. She was due at her home port of Bremen July 27.

The identity of the Targis' single passenger was not known here. First reports stated that between fourteen and eighteen persons over and above the crews were aboard the vessel, and it was reported that one of them was an American. Efforts to confirm this report were futile.

The meager messages from the captain of the Rangitoto gave no intimation of the dramatic scene which must have transpired when the crew, exhausted and smoke-grimed from their heroic battle with the flames gave up their ship and launched small boats on the turbulent ocean to board the Rangitoto.

From the captain's messages, it appeared no difficulty was encountered in launching lifeboats and rescuing the crew. Shipping authorities here paid tribute to the quick action of the Rangitoto's master in reaching the scene and aiding in getting the situation so well in hand that the mid-ocean blaze took no toll of life.

The successful rescue work was made possible, it is believed, by the fact calm weather prevailed at the time of the disaster. The blaze from the Targis' hold, illuminating the ocean in a wide red swath of light made easier the task of rescue workers.

Messages from the Rangitoto's captain indicated the crew of the Targis remained absolutely calm and possessed, and voluntarily passed up the chance of rescue until all hope of saving their vessel had passed.

No estimate was obtainable here of the financial loss which was sustained in the sinking of the Targis and destruction of her cargo.

private organizations are financing the erection of similar markers along the trail designating other points of interest, or places of local interest, which the state does not feel obliged to mark. For this reason Dr. Galloway is hoping for local assistance in installing plaques giving more detailed information at the place where the state marker is placed at Old Town.

It is Dr. Galloway's proposal that two markers be hung on each side of the door of the Old Town school, indicating the many historical events that transpired there during the pioneer days of Greene County. He has also suggested that the D. A. R. boulder may be made a part of this grouping of historical markings, while the state marker at the roadside would call attention of the public to the historical significance of the spot. Markers pointing out other historical places in this section could be erected gradually later if the central marking group is established now, he points out. The Sewah Studios is making a special price for these separate markers if the order is carried through the factory at the same time that the state markers are made.

The state markers will be placed along the trail by the state highway department, and will probably be finished by September 15, in the belief of Mr. Hawes. Although the Greene County Historical Society operates without a treasury, it may be able to assist in financing the added markers through individual donations of members, and civic and luncheon clubs may be asked also to support the proposal.

FAIRFIELD NATIVE AND FORMER XENIAN RETIRED BY PENNSY

C. D. Kinney, travelling freight agent of the Logansport division, who was born at Fairfield, and J. F. Willis, Columbus, who was a passenger conductor out of Xenia many years, are among eighty-seven employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad who were retired from active duty July 1 under the pension plan, had placed on the roll of honor.

Mr. Kinney was born July 13, 1860. He received his education at Yellow Springs and Versailles, O., and was first employed with the Logansport division as station clerk at Ridgeville, Ind., March 1, 1889. After working for fifteen months he retired, but re-entered the service July 1, 1904 as traveling freight agent, and remained in that capacity during the rest of his active service which totalled twenty-six years. His home is at Muncie, Ind., where he is a member of the Christian Church, and the Masonic lodge.

Mr. Willis is better known to local railroad men and their families because of his long service on the Cincinnati division, as passenger conductor. He was born June 22, 1860 and entered the services as a freight brakeman December 2, 1889. He became a conductor July 11, 1890. He was transferred to the Springfield local freight run and extra passenger out of Xenia March 16, 1917 and became a regular passenger conductor at Xenia March 8, 1918. His total service reached forty years and six months.

Mr. Willis says he hesitated to leave an ammunition factory to become a railroad, because of the danger in the latter occupation, but is now thoroughly convinced to the safety of modern railroading. He lives at 897 S. 22nd St., Columbus.

The Theater

Everyone must be sitting around out in Hollywood wondering what Howard Hughes is going to do next. Hughes, you know, is the wealthy young man who spent $4,000,000 and two years making "Hell's Angels" and now is going in the color picture business.

The latest on Hughes is that he has just bought the motion picture rights to "Queer People," the roughest satire yet written on Hollywood. The two young authors of this book dipped their pens in hall and have turned out what many believe to be an unfair, biased picture of the film colony.

Satire is a different thing to express on the screen and whether such fine performances as the doomed German soldiers. William Bakewell is the latest to get a good part. He has been signed by United Artists to play the juvenile in "The Bat Whispers," which Roland West will direct. Chester Morris, whom West discovered and made famous in "Alibi" will play the romantic lead in the piece.

Did you know that Grant Withers used to be a locomotive fireman? Withers, it will be remembered, is the huge and handsome young man who eloped with Loreta Young in the wake of a divorce from his first wife and caused a lot of commotion that has since died down.

The lid is being slowly screwed down in Xenia and if the present activities of the authorities continues the indications are that the city's entire booze supply will soon be under lock and key in the city prison.

Mr. Ridgley Torrence, New York is visiting relatives in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. George Luttrell, Hoop Road, are the happy parents of a daughter born last week.

Mr. John A. Nisbet, cashier of the Xenia National Bank, has gone to Brookside, W. Va., for a two weeks' vacation.

ROLAND WEST

Hughes can make a satisfactory alkali of the story, is not known. He also owns film rights to "The Front Page" is expected to reduce it, although that would be another difficult task for movie audience consumption.

"The Front Page" is a newspaper story laid in the press room of the criminal courts building in Chicago and with reporters as its principal characters.

It is not an immoral play, but its lines are so true to life, and the language of the reporters so picturesque, that there are many opportunities to offend the sensitive. As a Broadway legitimate play, it was accepted, but it is difficult to see how Hughes expects to get it past the censors unless he should amaze the play by changing the lines.

Remember Raymond McKee, who used to be a well known actor in the silent pictures? He's turned out to be quite versatile. First he started a craze for "chicken wacks" with his "Zulu Hut." Later, he's become a song-writer and has written the words and music to a hit, "Caribbean Sea." McKee used to play villain roles in the silent movies.

Universal's "All Quiet on the Western Front," has meant a great deal to the boys who contributed

POOR FARM INMATE IS CHAMPION HARD LUCK GUY IN WORLD

RED BLUFF, Cal., July 18.—When Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lamp in October, 1871, and brought disaster to Chicago, the event marked the beginning of a series of misfortunes which are still dogging the footsteps of George Brandenburg, now nearly 70 years of age and an inmate of the county poor farm here.

Brandenburg sympathized strongly with Job and agreed with that ancient philosopher that life was "full of trouble."

Disaster has followed disaster in rapid succession in Brandenburg's life, but he still hopes that things will get better.

Ten years of age at the time of the Chicago fire, Brandenburg stood helpless with a younger brother and sister and saw his mother walk to her death in their home near State and 22nd Streets. She had returned to the house for some articles overlooked in their flight from the burning building.

In the confusion, Brandenburg was separated from his brother and sister. His father was burned to death. He has not seen his sister since the fire, although he knows that she escaped.

For the next three years, Brandenburg struggled for existence by selling newspapers at night and herding cows by day at State and 46th Streets.

When fourteen years of age he went to work for a railroad in Missouri. At Trenton, Missouri, he met his brother whom he had not seen since the fire. The reunion was brief as he saw the brother killed under the wheels of a locomotive.

Brandenburg then became an engineer. He married and acquired a home, but in a railroad wreck both of his legs were scalded and he was in a hospital for two years. His home and the money he had saved went to pay hospital bills.

When he left the hospital, he learned that his wife had been suffering with cancer. An operation was arranged and she died under the anesthetic.

Still suffering from burns on his legs, Brandenburg became a wanderer. He eventually saved some money and purchased a small tract of land in a farm colony near here. The initial payment took all but $350 of his savings. On the first night that he occupied the place, burglars relieved him of this.

By thrift and self-denial he finally acquired a herd of thirteen cows. One morning he found nine of them dead from eating poisonous weeds.

He married for a second time, only to lose his wife six months later from heart disease.

A few days after the funeral, a fire of mysterious origin destroyed all the buildings on his property.

Neighbors and friends came to the rescue and provided him with another house, but the effects of the railroad accident incapacitated him, and he at last gave up and entered the poor house. The new home went back to the original owner. Today he is penniless and without kin.

"But life's only a game," Brandenburg said. "I've had plenty of bad luck, but I think things are going to get better now."

DYNAMITE BLAST KILLS MAN

RESCUE EFFECTED IN MID-OCEAN

STATE ASKS EXTREME PENALTY FOR SMITH; SANITY IN QUESTION

Jury Will Decide Fate Before Night Friday, Is Said

JEFFERSON, O., July 18.—The evidence against Tibby Smith, 26, accused of conspiring the murder of his 22-year-old wife, Clara, today was to be weighed on the scales of justice by a jury of twelve men.

Before nightfall, the young Ashtabula truckman will probably know whether he must pay with his life for the murder, which the state contends climaxed his ten-day illicit love affair with Mrs. Maude Lowther, 22-year-old quarter-blood Indian girl from the hills of West Virginia.

Jury deliberation on Smith's fate was delayed yesterday while the prosecution paraded several witnesses before the court in an effort to prove that the accused man, despite the defense contention that he is a "feeble-minded moron," is normal in every way.

Final pleas of the defense and the prosecution, the charge of Judge Charles A. Sargent, and the jury's decision are all that remain in the drama of Smith's fight for his life.

Howard M. Nazor, county prosecutor, began his final argument when court convened today. He demanded that the jury return a verdict that will send the young Ashtabula truckman to the electric chair.

The prosecutors' argument was to be followed by that of the defense attorneys, D. F. Dunlacy and C. S. Sheldon.

The defense attorneys planned to base their pleas for mercy on the contention that Smith is "mentally weak," and upon the testimony of eminent alienists that the man did not have the mental ability to plan or carry out such a murder plot as the state charges.

A verdict of acquittal, the defense attorneys admit, is not expected.

"We admit that Smith is a menace to society and should be locked up, but we claim that his life should be spared," Sheldon declared.

A verdict of second-degree murder, which carries a penalty of life imprisonment, would be considered a victory for the defense, as would a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity. Should the latter verdict be returned, Smith would be ordered confined to the Lima state hospital for the criminal insane for the remainder of his life.

HOTEL STRIKE IS STILL IN PROGRESS

CLEVELAND, July 18.—While union waitresses at two other hotels were planned to join the mass in Cleveland's kitchen and dining room hotel employees strike, only a flimsy hope was held today for an early settlement.

Waitresses at Hotel Cleveland and the Hollenden were slated to quit at noon today, making the strike complete at the ten leading Cleveland hotels.

Ralph M. Rowland, president of the National Association of Colored Waiters and Hotel Employees, came to the rescue of hotel managers yesterday when he offered members of his association to replace the strikers. He is alleged to have charged that unions have discriminated against colored hotel employees.

CUYAHOGA COUNTY OFFICIAL IS DEAD

CLEVELAND, O., July 18.—County Clerk George Wallace, 55, who was known as "the champion vote-getter of Cuyahoga County," died in St. Luke's Hospital here today from pneumonia, after an illness of more than a week.

Fire Chief George A. Wallace, father of the county clerk, was at his son's bedside when the end came.

Wallace's death was regarded as a loss to the Republican party in this county. He had been a member of the county Republican central committee and for twenty-five years was a board member of the Western Reserve Republican Club.

BRIDE IS MISSING

With mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mrs. Helen Edge, 21-year-old bride of Gary, Ind., police are awaiting the recovery of her husband, Edward G. Edge, a druggist, who has been ill with pneumonia, for questioning. Edge has been placed under arrest on suspicion of foul play at the investigation of the young wife's family, and authorities are planning to search sand dunes and stone quarries nearby for some trace of the girl. Edge and his bride are shown here.

CROP PROSPECTS OF YEAR FAIR; SPRING WHEAT PRICES LOW

Quality Of Grain Is High; Fewer Pigs Is Learned

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Crop prospects for this year are fair, but there will be fewer pigs.

This announcement was made today by the department of agriculture in its monthly survey of the agricultural situation. Referring to wheat, the all absorbing topic of the day, the survey revealed:

"Wheat harvest is in full swing. The crop has matured early and so far has been cut under favorable conditions, barring some interruptions by rains in eastern Kansas and Oklahoma. Thrashing returns in the southwest have shown irregular yields. Quality of the grain is high, being generally of good weight and with high protein content. Yields are poor in the Ohio valley.

"Spring wheat has made good average growth to date, though conditions vary as always. Young grain has suffered for lack of rain in eastern Montana and western South Dakota. The same is true also of southern Alberta and Saskatchewan. In Iowa it was damaged by storms. The outcome of the spring wheat crop will depend largely upon weather conditions during the next month.

"The continued low price of wheat is discouraging to the west. Growers are not disposed to hurry their threshing operations nor to sell grain in as heavy volume as usual on the early market. Terminal storage space is still about half filled with old grain.

REVOLUTION TRAIL MARKER CONTRACT AWARDED THURSDAY

Local Markings May Supplement State Sign Posts

That official state marking of the Revolutionary Trail, which passes through Greene County, will start this summer is revealed in the letting of the contract for the markers to the Sewah Studios, Marietta, Thursday.

Seven hundred miles of the trail through thirty-five counties will be marked, and the original contract calls for approximately 300 markers, which will be constructed of a special aluminum alloy, bronze treated and with the lettering in gold relief.

Because of the original request for $250,000 to finance the project was cut down to $50,000 in the appropriation, only one marker designating points of historic interest will be assigned to each county, it is revealed by E. M. Hawes, of the Sewah Studios, who conferred with Dr. W. A. Galloway, president of the Greene County Historical Society, here Friday.

The other markers will simply designate the trail and indicate the intersections, and will be placed at approximate four mile intervals along the trail. These markers show the name plate against a background of Revolutionary War soldiers in relief. The signs will be placed at right angles to the road so that they will always be in the line of vision of the motorists.

Greene County's marker designating points of historical interest will be placed at Old Town, near the point where the Daughters of American Revolution marker shows where Simon Kenton ran the gauntlet. Because only one such marker is available, Dr. Galloway points out that it will be impossible to designate on the single marker, all of the places of historical interest that would attract the tourist in and around Xenia.

According to Mr. Hawes many

BLACKMAIL LETTER IS FIFTH REVEALED

BELLEFONTAINE, O., July 18.—A fifth blackmail letter, asserted by written by the Reverend Frank E. Reddick, former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Huntville, north of here, was discovered today.

The letter was written to Daniel Plummer, of Bellefontaine, and demanded $5,000 in cash on the threat of Plummer's life. Reddick is in Logan County Jail here awaiting grand jury action on four counts of blackmail.

Plummer's letter was dated Springfield, Ohio, but was postmarked Bellefontaine.

The other four letters were written to Frank and Charles Howard, brothers, of Huntville, members of Reddick's congregation. Reddick is alleged to have threatened the life of Frank and told Charles that harm would come to his small daughter if they did not give him money. In each case the amount demanded was $5,000.

AUTO KILLS WOMAN

CLEVELAND, July 18.—Mrs. Oppenheimer, 65, is dead here today and her husband, Morris Oppenheimer, 76, is near death from injuries which they received late last night when they were struck by an automobile while alighting from a street car.

The driver of the automobile was questioned by police today concerning the accident.

ONE KILLED. MANY HURT WHEN PASSENGER TRAIN IS DERAILED

TRINIDAD, Colo., July 18.—One man was killed, another was critically injured and a score of passengers were bruised and shaken up when Colorado and Southern passenger train number 2, southbound, was derailed, ten miles south of here today.

The wreck, according to railroad officials, was the result of an apparent plot, as a section of rail had been carefully removed from the track. Spikes and an angle bar were withdrawn. Wrenches and tools with which the rail had been taken up were found nearby.

The engine overturned the baggage car, toppled over an embankment and broke in two and one chair car was derailed. The five remaining cars on the train remained upright.

The engineer and fireman both had miraculous escapes, crawling from beneath the wrecked engine unhurt.

PASSENGER AND CREW TAKEN FROM BURNING VESSEL IN ATLANTIC

North German Lloyd Freighter Sinks 800 Miles East Of Bermuda; British Ship Makes Thrilling Rescue

NEW YORK, July 18.—Later information received by the local offices of the North German Lloyd Line today confirmed newspaper reports that the freighter Targis, which burned and sank in mid-ocean, was owned by the Roland steamship line, a subsidiary of the North German Lloyd.

Previously officials of the line had said that their only vessel named Targis could not have been in the position where the sinking occurred.

The Targis left Iquique, Chile, on June 25, and was due at Antwerp about July 27. The vessel carried a crew of forty-two and one passenger as supercargo.

LONDON, July 18.—In a dramatic mid-ocean rescue, the sole passenger and forty-two members of the crew of the North German Lloyd freighter Targis were saved from death by a British steamer today when the Targis burned and sank 800 miles east of Bermuda.

The Targis, a steel vessel of 5,452 tons, ordinarily carries between fourteen and eighteen passengers as supercargo. At the offices of the North German Lloyd line here, however, it was said that only one passenger was aboard in addition to the crew.

The rescue was effected by the British freighter Rangitoto, registered at Auckland, N. Z.

News of the rescue was contained in brief wireless messages from the master of the Rangitoto, which answered the Targis' call for help late last night. The Rangitoto, a freighter of 955 tons gross, found the Targis ablaze, with fire burning fiercely in three of her holds.

Small boats were put out from the Rangitoto, and the single passenger taken aboard the rescue

CHINA REBELS HOLD MISSION PARTY CAPTIVE

PEKING, July 18.—Thirty-six Americans and several British missionaries were captured by rebels and are being held in the upper regions of the Min River, it became known here today.

The American and British consuls immediately organized a miniature rescue expedition and left Peking this morning on a launch flying the American and British colors. They hope not only to secure the release of the latest captives but also to arrange for the return of two British woman missionaries now being held for a ransom of 100,000 Chinese dollars by Communist bandits.

Several days ago the British government evacuated all British residents from the region, and that it intends it could reach and Americans were urged to leave the bandit and rebel infested territory as soon as possible. It is believed the raiders caught the large party while the latter was on its way here to escape further molestation.

SERIOUSLY HURT

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 18.—Harry McNeer, 40, New Boston garage owner, was in a critical condition in a hospital here today suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries which he sustained late yesterday when his automobile collided head-on with a street car.

GERMAN REICHSTAG AGAIN DISSOLVED

BERLIN, July 18.—Chancellor Heinrich Brüning dissolved the German Reichstag today. Immediately after members voted against President Von Hindenburg's financial decree, issued a few days ago.

The vote was 226 against and 221 for the measure.

THESE MIDDIES! THEY'RE AT IT AGAIN!

ANNAPOLIS, Md., July 18.—This quaint old capital is again stirred up over the latest escapade of midshipmen at the naval academy.

Two members of the third class are in the brig on the training ship and their mess mates are confined to quarters because two Washington girls, said to be prominent in society,

CHICAGO-LONDON ROMANCE HINTED

Chicago's gold coast is predicting the marriage of Mrs. Dudley Coats, popular figure in London society, and Marshall Field, III, wealthy merchant. Mrs. Coats' husband died of war wounds at the age of 29, and Mrs. Field has been in Reno, since May, when it was expected she would file suit for divorce. The Fields have three children. Field and Mrs. Coats are above.

OFFICER, SUSPECT KILLED IN GUN DUEL

GREENSBURG, Pa., July 18.—Private Charles Stewart, of Troop A, Pennsylvania state police, and John Sabol, alleged blackhand, shot each other to death in a gun duel in a cemetery at Monessen, near here today.

The shooting climaxed setting of a trap for Sabol who was shot down while picking up a package of marked money in the cemetery.

State police set the trap for Sabol following receipt of a threatening letter by G. F. Wright, Monessen furniture dealer.

Sabol attempted to shoot his way out of the trap and Stewart, nearest member of a police detail, grappled with the alleged blackhand.

Stewart crumpled to the ground as Sabol fired at point-blank range. As he fell, fatally wounded, Stewart tugged at his service pistol and fired one shot.

Sabol collapsed and died almost instantly.

Stewart was rushed to the Monongahela Hospital where he died a few hours after the shooting.

GREAT BRITAIN REJECTS PLAN FOR UNITED STATES OF EUROPE

LONDON, July 18.—Great Britain, last to reply to Aristide Briand's proposal for a federated Europe, today sent the French foreign minister's hopes for a "United States of Europe" aglimmering as ascribing the verdict "neither necessary nor desirable" to his project.

Warm approval is expressed for Briand's principles of closer economic cooperation in the reply published this morning, but the opinion is set forth that the desired object could better be obtained within the framework of the League of Nations.

Couching its opposition to Briand's plan in the most diplomatic terms, the British government catalogued its objections to the federation under three main heads: first, that the plan would lead to confusion and rivalry with the League of Nations; second, that there is danger of causing "anxiety or resentment" in other continents, and third, that as a member of the British commonwealth this country has special

COLUMBUS, O., July 18.—Robert O. Ryder, editor-in-chief of the Ohio State Journal, local morning paper, and a nationally-known columnist and editorial writer, today resigned his position with the Journal and announced his retirement from active newspaper work.

He became suddenly ill a year or so ago and since then has been forced to relinquish editorial duties.

Ryder will be succeeded by Jacob A. Meckstroth, former secretary to ex-Governor Donahey, and who has been connected with the Journal since 1913.

CEDARVILLE WATER SYSTEM EMPLOYEE IS EXPLOSION VICTIM

Albert Graham Dies Going To Hospital; Married July 4

Albert Graham, 40, Tiltonsville, O., employed as a crew boss by the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., which is installing a water system at Cedarville, was mortally injured there Friday morning in an explosion of a dynamite charge after he entered a trench to investigate failure of the blast to ignite.

Graham died while on the way to a McMillan ambulance.

The accident occurred on Xenia Ave. at 9:30. The crew of men working in the trench were blasting being done through solid rock for the purpose of laying the water mains, left it and sought places of safety to await the discharge which was set off by electricity fifty feet away.

Graham was with the workmen, and when the blast failed to take place within the customary time, he descended into the trench, which was about twelve feet deep to see if the connection was properly made, despite warning shouts of his companions. The explosion occurred almost immediately after he entered the excavation.

Graham's mangled form was lifted out by fellow workmen and Dr. H. C. Schick, who was called, ordered his removal to the hospital, accompanying him in the ambulance. The injured man died when the ambulance reached a point between Wilberforce and Xenia, but the trip to the hospital was continued.

The body was taken back to Cedarville, and removed to the McMillan funeral home, where it was viewed later in the day by Dr. R. L. Haines, Greene County coroner.

Graham was married July 4 to Miss Nina Nestor of Clarksburg, W. Va., at Clarksburg. His bride was prostrated after learning of the accident at the home of Alva Ford where the Grahams have been living. He is survived by a mother and other relatives at Tiltonsville.

Disposition of the body is awaiting the coroner's verdict and word from relatives of the dead man.

Graham had been employed by the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Co. ever since it began the installation of the water system in Cedarville last spring. It has been necessary to blast away the solid rock that underlies part of the village in order to lay the mains on Xenia Ave., and workmen have been engaged in this task for some time.

BANDITS KILL COP, ESCAPE

CHICAGO, July 18.—Two bandits, captured and supposedly disarmed, unexpectedly produced a revolver today, shot and killed one policeman and shot another, perhaps fatally, then escaped.

The policemen, members of a two-man flivver detail, were:

John Gultanan, killed by a bullet through the head;

Anthony Wistort, shot through the abdomen and believed dying.

Surprising the bandits in the act of robbing a south side auto sales company, the two officers disarmed them. While waiting for the patrol wagon one robber suddenly whipped out a revolver and shot both officers. Gultanan died instantly.

The bandit pair then fled on foot.

SINGER STRICKEN BY APPENDICITIS

CHICAGO, July 18.—Said to be suffering an attack of acute appendicitis, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, known on the European opera stage as Mme. Claire Dux, early today was taken to Presbyterian Hospital here for an emergency operation.

The opera singer was stricken last night while she was attending the opera at Ravinia, near Wilmette, Ill. She was first taken to Evanston Hospital where a diagnosis was made and physicians decided to operate.

Mrs. Swift has an international reputation in the world of opera.

SEEK EMBEZZLER

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., July 18.—Police here today were searching for W. F. Perrell of Proctorville, Ohio, bookkeeper for the City Ice Delivery Co., of this city, who has been missing since last Wednesday. He was last seen when he left the company's office to make a deposit.

A warrant, charging him with the embezzlement of $1,698, was sworn out yesterday by company officials.

CHAPTER 53

She considered a moment. Would that be unfair to Madge and Aunt Jennie? She was sure they would approve, for they both held Don in such high regard. Already, she liked him very much, herself. He reminded him so much of Winfield—she checked her thoughts.

"Very well—if Madge hasn't planned something else," she agreed.

"I'll see that it's canceled, if she has," he laughed, delighted that she had agreed to his plans.

Someone produced a mandolin and some ukuleles and the crowd sang for an hour, everything from "Sweet Adeline" and "Moanin' Low" to "Sunny Side Up" and "Should I?" Don stayed at Clara Dee's side, whispering affectionate remarks between choruses, watched her lovely face as she sang.

He came for her next day in a high-powered green roadster, and they drove to Smith's Dam at the river, changed to bathing suits at the modest shack which served for a bath house. Clara Dee swam as she danced, gracefully and easily. She could dive as well as Don—did the swan dive and jack-knife perfectly, to his delight and admiration. They raced against the current and drifted down. He won with his strength rather than his greater skill. She was glad that she had learned something during those purposeless years. She had at least learned to be a good sport where pleasure was concerned.

"You are wonderful," he enthused, when they had climbed to the grassy bank to rest. "And you ride, don't you?"

"Yes, indeed!" with enthusiasm. "I love to ride!"

"And dance like a professional, play tennis and golf—have your own mount, or did have, speak French better than most people do their own native tongue—come, tell me all about it. You don't know what a pleasure it is to meet a girl like you! Why, do you know that the majority of the girls around here have never been in a lake or river, would drown instantly if they tried to swim and—horrors—to wear a one-piece bathing suit like yours—never!"

She laughed exuberantly. "Poor things—they miss a lot of life after all, don't they?"

"Yes, but I suppose if they are content—that is happiness. But you see, I've had the good or ill fortune. I don't know which, to taste the variety of life, yet I'm compelled to remain here where my interests are and probably always will be. Not that I couldn't find those very pleasures here. The problem has been someone to share them. I had despaired until—" She looked at her as if seeking her consent to go on.

She was making a chain of clovers and offered him no encouragement. He moved closer and laid his big brown hand over her two slender white ones.

"Clara Dee—" his voice lowered with earnestness. "You know I've loved you ever since the first moment I saw you. I know I'm not good enough for you—that my life isn't your life—that it isn't fair to ask you to hide away here, but— isn't there some way—perhaps if you would tell me about yourself—"

She felt a sudden desire to make him happy. She pitied him in his loneliness for she knew what it was to be lonely, to be without sympathetic companionship. He was so fine and worthy of what he wanted—but she could feel other eyes imploring her, commanding her—"There isn't much to tell, Don. My father was a very wealthy man; but when he died, almost a year ago—he left me nothing, for some mysterious reason. And I've earned my own living since. No need to tell him of those ribbing months, those heart-rending experiences. He would understand, she knew as probably no one she had ever known, but she couldn't tell him.

"You brave, dear little thing. You don't need to tell me what you have been through. Such an experience would be bad enough for one who had never known luxury. But you!"

"Yes, but I am thankful now for having had the experience. I was never so happy as I am now—"

"Now, Clara Dee? Is it possible that you could care for me?"

"I—why—I don't know, Don. I scarcely know you and you don't know me."

"I believe I do. When kindred souls meet, is it time necessary for them to become acquainted? I love you so that nothing—nothing you have done nor nothing you could ever say or do, could change that."

She marvelled at so beautiful a revelation. This was a love she had never known—the kind she has defied to Ivan—the love that was complete understanding, unquestioning faith, trust and protection—and she could not speak.

He wound the clover chain about her wrists, took them gently in his hands and drew her to her feet. "It's not fair to insist upon your answer now, dear. Indeed, I want you to be very sure about it first. Let's dive once more and dress for supper."

She was glad for the respite. Her mind was a turmoil. Had she never known Winfield—it might be very easy to be sure about Don. She dressed with trembling fingers and walked slowly out to the machine where he was waiting. He carried the picnic hamper over under the trees and helped her to arrange their supper on a linen cloth spread on the grass.

She exclaimed over the delicacies he had brought. "But you shouldn't have troubled so much for me. Who did all this for you?"

He beamed with satisfaction. "It wasn't trouble, my dear. Rather a joy. I supplied everything I could from my gardens and my mother provided the rest. You must meet my mother soon. You will love her, I know."

"I haven't a doubt," she agreed. "It must be very wonderful to have a mother."

There was salad and little iced cakes, dainty sandwiches, great luscious tomatoes, crisp radishes, roses, olives, pink-meated cantaloupes, downy yellow peaches, lemons in a thermos jug. Their strenuous exercise had given them both a hearty appetite and they ate in contented silence for awhile. Don was stretched on the grass beside her, his head supported with his left hand while he ate with the right.

"Shall we ride, early in the morning?" he asked.

"Delightful. But where shall I get a horse?"

"I don't think Tom has one that would be suitable," he considered, "but I'll bring my saddle horse for you and ride one of our work horses, myself."

"Oh, no—that would be no pleasure for you!"

"Oh, no—that would be no pleasure for you!"

"My dear—anything with you would be a pleasure—whether conditions were ideal or not." His eyes probed hers. "Is there some one else?" he asked with fear. When she did not instantly deny it, he exclaimed, "There can't be!"

How could she tell him that her heart was somewhere in the wilds of Canada, perhaps, with a say-eyed youth who stood alone in hip-boots in some swift stream, fishing for trout—that except for a cruel trick of fate, she should be there beside him "hand in hand." She couldn't. But what of her life? Must she always be lonely because she had sent him away forever? If this man did love her, if she could make him happy, if she could learn to love him, even if not with complete renunciation—would it be fair to him? He was offering her everything—a precious devotion—

"Oh, Don! Tell me why life is so complicated," was all she said.

A shadow crossed his tanned face. "We all ask that question at some time in our lives; it has been asked for centuries—yet not one has ever found the answer for it. I suppose many of us complicate our own lives. There seems usually to be an inevitable fate for each of us, yet to a certain extent, we are masters of our own destinies."

"It seems to me that we are for the most part masters of our own lives, except in the matter of love; and that is of such supreme importance. You say you have waited for me through the years—I've come—but Don, I don't love you. I don't believe I ever could—and I like you very much."

"I shan't accept that for your answer, Clara Dee—you don't know yet. You can't. You see, you were not prepared for me, while I have been waiting for you. I know without your telling me, that there have been others before me. Which only makes it the more bewildering for you. It matters not to me who the others were—if only you can love me some day," he took her hand and kissed it tenderly, reverently.

CHILD WELFARE PROGRAM

PRESENTED BY W. C. T. U. Forty members of McClellan W. C. T. U. were present at the meeting of the union held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Earl Soward, Lower Bellbrook Pike. The devotion service was in charge of Mrs. Effie Tindall, who read the 121st Psalm. A short business meeting followed at which Mrs. Hazel Manor, president, presided. The union is sending a friendship chest to the Philippine Islands and members brought their gifts for the chest to Thursday's meeting. Mrs. Tindall, county director of the child welfare department, had charge of the white ribbon service at which time white ribbons were tied on three small children. The subject for the afternoon's program was "Child Welfare" and was in charge of Mrs. Cora Fawcett and Mrs. Mary Devoe.

A short musical program was also enjoyed by the members during the afternoon and consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Lorena Dean, accompanied by Mrs. Ray Fudge; two readings by Miss Jean Conlin, a violin solo by Miss Helen Hess and a piano solo by Thelma Fawcett. The meeting closed by members singing the Temperance Doxology. A cooling refreshment course was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Jasper Armstrong and Mrs. Kenneth Soward.

YOUNG XENIA COUPLE

MARRIED IN KENTUCKY. Announcement is being made of the marriage of Miss Winifred Cross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cross, Hill St., to Mr. Paul Combs, which took place in Covington, Ky., Sunday, July 13. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Clark, at the M. E. parsonage in that city.

The young couple was attended by Miss Helen Chambliss and Mr. Joseph Haverstick, this city. The bride wore a frock of flowered chiffon and other accessories to harmonize.

Mrs. Combs is a graduate of Central High School with the class of 1929 and is employed in the beauty department at Job's. Mr. Combs is the son of Mrs. Johanna Combs, W. Church St., and is a graduate of St. Brigid High School with the class of 1928. He is employed at Fletcher's Grocery.

For the present the couple is residing with the bride's parents, but will later go to housekeeping, their future plans not yet being definite.

PLAYLET ENTERTAINS

MISSIONARY SOCIETY. Members of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church, Yellow Springs, enjoyed a very unique program Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. N. Wolford.

A missionary play, "Friendship Dolls," was presented by the group of girls, under the direction of Miss Katherine Fittz. Miss Fittz, the daughter of Mayor and Mrs. D. H. Fittz, is a student at the Schuster-Martin School of Dramatics at Cincinnati and is at present on a vacation at her home. Miss Fittz showed remarkable ability in directing the play, which was greatly enjoyed by the forty guests present. Miss Fittz entertained the guests with two readings at the close of the playlet.

A social hour followed the program and a cooling refreshment course was served by Mrs. Wolford.

W. H. O. CLASS MEETS

Members of the W. H. O. Bible Class of the United Brethren Church, met at the home of Mrs. A. B. Feilman, S. Monroe St., Thursday evening for the regular July meeting. A short business session was held, followed by a social hour, when refreshments were served to thirty-two guests.

The August meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles, Upper Bellbrook Pike. Members of the choir of the First Presbyterian Church will meet Friday evening to prepare for special music for the communion services on next Sunday morning. Mrs. H. C. Armstrong, choir director, who has been spending several weeks in California with her daughter, Mrs. Percy Minshall, is expected to return to Xenia this week in time to resume her work Friday evening.

Mrs. T. E. Cummings, who has been ill for some time, is slowly improving at her home on W. Main St.

The Junior Missionary Society of the Second United Presbyterian Church will meet at the church Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A full attendance is desired at the meeting.

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary will hold their regular meeting Monday evening July 21, at 7:30 o'clock. A large attendance is desired as important business is to be transacted.

The picnic which was to have been held by members of the Victor's Class, Trinity M. E. Church, has been postponed a week from Monday, July 21 to July 28.

Miss Virginia Johnston, Auburn, N. Y., is the guest this week of Miss Barbara Little, N. King St. Miss Little is entertaining a number of friends at a luncheon-bridge Saturday in honor of her guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Purdon and son have returned to their home in Fort Wayne, Ind. after spending several days with relatives in Xenia and Cedarville. Mr. Purdon is road foreman of engines for the Pennsylvania Railroad at Fort Wayne.

Miss Irene Parrett, W. Third St., returned home Thursday after spending several days in Cincinnati as a guest at a house-party at the home of Mrs. H. L. Thompson, Hyde Park.

Mrs. John R. Beacham and son, John Charles, Hill St., arrived home Tuesday after spending two weeks in the East. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Merchant, former Xenians, at Mt. Pocono, Pa., and also spent several days in New York City.

POPULAR YOUNG COUPLE

UNITED IN MARRIAGE. Miss Mary Rose Haller, daughter of Mrs. Sarah Haller, Cincinnati Ave., became the bride of Mr. Lloyd E. Downey in a quiet ceremony performed at the rectory of St. Brigid Church, W. Second St., Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. The Rev. David Powers officiated at the ceremony, the single ring service being used.

The young couple's attendants were Miss Kathleen Downey, sister of the bridegroom, and Mr. Charles Mangan. The bride wore a hand-painted frock of pink silk crepe with accessories of blonde while Miss Downey's gown was of flowered chiffon.

Mrs. Downey has been employed at the Velvet Ice Cream Co., E. Main St. Mr. Downey, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Downey, W. Main St., is employed at the Roy Hull filling station, Dayton Ave.

The young couple has gone to housekeeping in an apartment on Leaman St., where they are at home to their relatives.

MISS HARNER ENTERTAINS

FOR OUT-OF-TOWN GUESTS. Miss Jane Harner, W. Church St., was hostess to a group of young people at a dancing party at the Garfield cottage, Thursday evening. Eighteen guests were entertained at the affair which was in compliment to Miss Marjorie DuBrul, Cincinnati, house guest of Miss Elleen Sayre and Mr. Robert Fulghum, Dallas, Texas.

The young couple enjoyed dancing and an informal social time during the evening after which a refreshment course was served by Miss Harner.

Jean Connor, Middletown, is spending a few weeks in this city with relatives.

Mrs. Paul McFarland, W. Second St., underwent an operation here Friday morning for the removal of her tonsils.

Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Lowe and son, Bobby, N. Galloway St., will spend Sunday in Hillsboro with Mrs. Lowe's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Farls.

Miss Katherine Lane, student nurse at Good Samaritan Hospital, Cincinnati, will arrive in this city Saturday to spend a month's vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lane, High St.

NEIGHBORS ENJOIN BUILDING OF MINIATURE GOLF COURSE

A temporary injunction against the construction of a miniature golf course on a lot at Detroit St. and Fairground Ave., by Louis Menowitz and others, Cincinnati, was allowed Friday afternoon by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy.

POLICE CAPTURE BOYS AFTER ESCAPE

LIBERTY was sweet but short lived Thursday night for three 14-year-old lads being held temporarily in the women's quarters at the city prison.

The night police force, however, was given a worried hour before the trio was rounded up and safe back in their cells, this time locked up.

Edward Thornton was found in bed at the home of his parents on W. Second St., and Woodrow Vance and Herbert Johnson were rounded up while cowering in a barn in the west end.

Their companions aged 14, 12 and 11 years failed to make their escape. The boys were being held at police headquarters because the detention room at the county jail was not available. They were allowed the run of the women's quarters, being confined only by a door fastened on the outside with a hasp and staple.

The boys removed a mirror from its frame and letting it down through the barred transom over the door by a string used it to reflect the door fastening while another of the number with a long wire hooked on the end, removed the staple from the hasp, unlocking the door. All that remained to do to gain freedom was to open the same kind of a fastening on an outside door leading to the rear of City Hall.

When the escape was discovered by Desk Sergeant H. L. Karch at 2 o'clock the boys are believed to have been gone only a short time. Their companions refused to talk, saying that they were "asleep" when the escape occurred. The three had been rounded up and were back in their cells at 3 a. m.

Police Chief O. H. Cornwell believes that the wire which aided the boys in escaping was passed in to them from the outside through the open, barred window.

STOP "CODDLING" CRIMINALS ADVICE OF EX-POLICEMAN

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—Abolish prison reformers; silence "sob sisters"; hang murderers; make prison life "tough" and—"Treat a crook like a scoundrel, for that's all he is or ever will be." That, in a nutshell, is Duncan Matheson's idea of deterring crime in America, and Matheson, now city treasurer of San Francisco, speaks from a background of thirty years on the police force here, thirteen of which he was chief of detectives.

"These social workers and other amateur prison reformers have the wrong slant on the crook," Matheson said today. "He isn't a misfit in society. He's a downright scoundrel and no brain operation or educational program will ever correct him."

"What will correct him, is a short, sharp prison sentence in a prison that is a prison instead of a rest camp. Feed him well and house him warmly in sanitary surroundings. Then make him work like fury and deny him all luxuries like tobacco, sweets, newspapers, radios, shows and baseball games. He won't like that and will try to stay out of prison in the future."

Matheson claims he never saw a crook who was a medical case "except those with diabetes or gout from rich prison fare" and that the insanity law is just a ruse to open the doors to asylums from which escape is easy.

He likes Canadian methods. "One time I saw an American crook on the street in Ontario," he said. "I asked him how he was."

"'Awful,'" answered the crook. "I just got through serving two years and ten months of a three year sentence for blowing safes. And what I mean, I served them. I'm getting back to the good old United States as fast as I can. No more of the Canadian prisons."

"That same crook here," added Matheson, "would have got a long sentence, served just a small part of it in pleasant surroundings, and would have gone right back to safe cracking. Our prisons are no deterrents."

"And as for capital punishment, it prevents murders. Our life sentences mean about thirteen years as a rule because of pardons, paroles and time off. Then these killers are thrown back on society."

"Going back to Canada again, I know of two criminals there who waited until a man got into the United States to kill him. They hang 'em too quick in Canada to take a chance, one of them told me."

Home Killed Yearling Baby Beef

The case will be heard July 24 or 25 on the question of making the injunction permanent it was announced.

Plaintiffs to the action are Attorney W. L. Miller, and thirteen other property owners in the neighborhood, including Rec. W. H. Telford, R. O. Wead, former county auditor; Mrs. Madison Kump, L. S. Allen, County Auditor P. H. Creswell and others.

Perry Brothers, Cincinnati firm holding the contract for building the miniature course, were made parties defendant to the suit which was brought by the law firm of Miller and Finney.

The injunction is sought on the grounds that a miniature or "Tom Thumb" golf course would become a public nuisance to individual neighbors because of the resulting commotion occasioned by crowds congregating at the grounds, lights, soft drink and refreshment concessions, large amount of traffic with the noise of stopping and starting automobiles, that would prevent reasonable comfort and enjoyment of home and interfere with physical and mental comfort of the ordinary individual.

Construction of the miniature course was commenced Monday and it had been expected to be completed by the end of the week. Louis Menowitz and his partner who is unnamed in the petition have retained Attorney F. L. Johnson as counsel.

GET WASTE OUT OF YOUR SYSTEM

Banish Constipation at the Start with Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Look out when you wake up tired and stay tired. Beware of headaches, unpleasant breath. These are usually the first symptoms of constipation.

The trouble is that your intestinal system is clogged. You have eaten too many bulkless foods. But you can clean your system safely, if you start at once to eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a cereal that you can eat naturally. It sweeps the intestines clean of poisonous wastes. Far better than habit-forming pills and drugs.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—recurring cases with every meal. You'll like its crispness and flavor. Your system will benefit by its rich store of iron and healthful elements as well as by its roughage.

Ready-to-eat with milk or cream. Delicious with fruit and honey added. Use it in cooking. Recipes are on the package for muffins and griddle cakes. Sold by all grocers. Served by hotels, restaurants and dining-cars. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

ASKS $18,400

Jean Acker, film and vaudeville actress, better known as the first wife of the late Rudolph Valentino, has brought suit in New York City to compel William Deleahanty, realty promoter and politician to pay her $18,400 a year for the rest of her life. Miss Acker alleges breach of financial contract under which Deleahanty promised to pay her that amount after she left the movies in 1925.

NATIONAL GUARD TO LEAVE SUNDAY FOR CAMP PERRY OUTING

Recruited to its full complement of sixty-three men, Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, will leave Xenia Sunday morning for Camp Perry, the O. N. G. rifle range on Lake Erie, to spend two weeks.

The local militiamen will leave Xenia on a special train from the Pennsylvania station at 7:30 a. m. The company will be under command of Captain O. H. Cornwell.

its commanding officer, who has obtained his two weeks' vacation for that period, in order to spend it at camp with his men.

The advance detail consisting of Sergeant Herman Gill and Cook Carl Helmer, started Friday morning for Camp Perry and they will have a hearty supper ready for their hungry comrades when they arrive.

The militiamen will return to Xenia August 3, and will then prepare for occupancy of the new state armory which is nearing completion.

YOUTH UNHURT IN SUICIDE ATTEMPT

COLUMBUS, O., July 18.—An unidentified youth who escaped unhurt yesterday after he had attempted suicide by flinging himself in front of an oncoming street car, today was being held in city prison for mental observation.

The youth, who was caught on the fender of the car and merely rolled along the track until the trolley could be halted, refused to give his name or to talk. Police did get him to say that his age is 22. Authorities, who will give the young man a mental test today, believe that he may be suffering from a lapse of memory. Parts of the youth's clothing bear Cleveland trademarks.

WORKERS GET BONUS

MILITOWN, N. J., July 18.—A bonus amounting to $700,000 will be paid at once to 700 employees who have been out of work since the plant shut down three months ago. J. H. Michelin, head of a tire company, announced today. The bonus represents the accumulation of funds due employees under an old contract.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

LEGAL LIGHT—If any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.—Matthew 5:40, 41.

THE SUPERLATIVE AGE

Glibly using the expression "super-salesman" the other day, we were struck anew with the realization that this popular and typically American prefix is simply a contraction of "superlative." The dictionary tells us that "superlative" is "Raised to or occupying the high pitch, position or degree; most eminent; surpassing all other; supreme; as, a man of superlative wisdom."

It might be well for the national soul if we stopped some of the egotistical insistence on the superlative quality of our men and our machines. Admittedly we are good; but are we so good that we honestly surpass everyone else in everything? We should remind ourselves that "Pride goeth before a fall," and that to characterize our products with "superlative" is to exhibit a pride which has already tended toward extravagant exaggeration.

This is the tourist season. Many of our citizens have gone abroad, bearing with them that consciousness of superiority which has subjected Americans to no little criticism. If we were really as superlative in many qualities of the spirit as we acknowledge ourselves to be in commerce and industry, we might give proof of this by our supreme courtesy and consideration for the rights of others, thereby avoiding the charge that Americans are blatant, boastful, ruthless, disrespectful and many other adjectives far removed from the superlative in its flattering sense. We do not believe in false humility; but there is a proper pride which expresses itself in a decent respect for ourselves and for others.

The whole point is that our application of the abbreviation "super" has been entirely material, without extending it to those spiritual excellences implied in the meaning of the word, over which we have a tendency to be self-conscious, and so to underrate.

COOLING DOWN

There is practical sanity in the assurance that the French government will lay down no new ships of war for the next six months which Paris has conveyed to Rome. The action is plainly a bid for a maintenance of the status quo during a period set aside for the operation of a cooling down process. It is an inferential if not direct expression of hope that at the end of a half year the feelings of irritation in France and Italy will have subsided sufficiently to permit a resumption of the conversations regarding naval limitation which were broken off almost peremptorily a few weeks ago, and were succeeded by a time of tension in which war talk became common conversation.

M. Briand is quite explicit and frank on the point. He has told the chamber of deputies that war in Europe just now is neither possible nor admissible. He has declared that by keeping calm France does not lessen its reputation, but improves its strength and its desire for peace; and he has expressed a belief that before the end of 1930 the misunderstandings between the French government and Mussolini can be ironed out, and ground for an arrangement regarding both the naval issue and the differences over Tripoli and Tunisia, found.

M. Briand is, of course, the professional pacifier of France and his words generally are highly optimistic when he gets started on his theme. None the less he is at present in a strategic position with respect to the policies of his country, and if he is left to manage affairs it is possible that he may be able to arrange some modus vivendi which will avoid the clash in the Mediterranean that a good many people seem to think must come.

Every little while some news comes out of Buncombe county, North Carolina. The latest report is that more than 3,000,000 honey bees have died from feasting on moonshine mash, which makes them so drunk that, unable to fly home, they starve to death or freeze. The item also says that prohibition enforcement officers use bees as unofficial bloodhounds for trailing stills. Well, we warned you that this came from Buncombe county.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

NOTHING FINAL

Scientists, not long ago took a photograph of an electron, the smallest particle of matter, enlarged it, studied it. They were the first to have a look at the smallest unit of matter. But science doesn't aim at finality. It aims only at truth. What seems truth today may prove tomorrow to be inaccurate. The electron is the smallest thing today. Later it may not be the smallest thing. Let's never be boastful about our achievements. Think rather that tomorrow we may do better.

A NEW FORCE

Many of us make the mistake of thinking we can deliberately put something out of our mind and not put anything in to take its place. That's not the way to proceed. It can't be done. If you want to clear unhealthy, unhappy thoughts out of your mind you have to replace them definitely with something else. The mind in waking hours cannot be inactive. It is not made that way. Give the mind good food and it builds body and character. Just trying to keep it empty is no use. It won't work that way. There are plenty of definite, constructive things to think about. Plenty of food for the mind.

SMOKE TALK

Today more cigarettes are smoked by women than were smoked by both men and women ten years ago. Not that this is very important, but it is another indication that human customs are no exception to the rule that everything changes and most things change fast. Ten years from now we may have new statistics that will astonish vastly more than these.

THE EASY TRUTH

If politicians only knew how much time and trouble and worry they could save themselves by simply telling the truth, more of them might adopt the policy. The truth is often the easiest possible way out of the greatest difficulties.

DON'T WANT ENFORCEMENT

Speaking of prohibition, and almost everybody is speaking of it, Maryland never had an enforcement law. New York, Wisconsin, Montana and Nevada repealed their enforcement acts. In the fall Massachusetts will have a vote of the people to decide whether they will repeal their law which provides for state enforcement. It will probably carry. Massachusetts is pretty wet. That will make six states whose people, by majority rule, say they don't want the Volstead law enforced. When people go on record to the effect that they do not wish a law enforced it is time to have a serious examination of the law they are officially deciding to ignore. Nobody can blame President Hoover for wanting his crime commission to do a thorough job of investigation.

What is the meaning of a five-leaved clover? Are they found often?

The only real significance of a five-leaved clover is that nature is trying an experiment. If the extra leaves proved of value to the clover, a five-leaved species might develop. In some regions the five-leaved plant is considered especially lucky, while in others it is considered of evil significance to the finder. Five-leaved clover is much rarer than the four-leaved variety.

Memorial Coins

Was the proposal to issue a 50-cent piece commemorating the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony passed by congress?

No. About 50 proposals for special issues of coinage were abandoned following President Hoover's pronouncement against this type of coinage.

Aurora Borealis

Does the Aurora Borealis occur at any particular time of the year?

The Aurora Borealis, more commonly termed "the northern lights," may occur at almost any time of the year, but is most often seen in October and in April. It is seldom seen in the summer, or in the middle of the winter.

War Is Hell

Did Sherman actually utter the expression, "War is hell?"

The expression is attributed to General Sherman, although it was not remembered by him. John Koolbeck, of Hamilton, Iowa, who was aide-de-camp to General Winslow, testified that after the Battle of Vicksburg General Sherman was watching the crossing of the army over a pontoon bridge and he (John Koolbeck) distinctly heard Sherman say, "War is hell."

Autos in Bermuda

Are automobiles permitted in Bermuda?

Automobiles are not permitted in Bermuda because the people desire their island to remain free from the traffic congestion and noises that go with automobiles.

Making Money

Who prints the paper money of the United States?

The Bureau of Printing and Engraving of the treasury department manufactures all paper money of the government, all stamps, including revenue stamps, all official checks, drafts, warrants, commissions, certificates, transportation requests, and liquor permits. There are 4,900 employees who work in the bureau turning out more than 400,000,000 sheets of paper money a year.

STATISTICS
NEW YORK CITY, New York. — Among 4,400 claims recently analyzed by a New York accident insurance concern, 807 were the result of baseball mishaps. Three of the 4,400 were damaged playing ping pong. More than a hundred were scarred by fireworks. Swimming and bathing followed baseball in relative danger, with wrestling and "friendly scuffling" next. Boating, skating and tennis followed in the order named.

No mention was made of the greatest of all outdoor sports: Arguing with Traffic Cops, or the leading indoor amusements: Opening Car Windows for Petty Girls, and Skidding on the Procter and Gamble in the Bathroom.

TITLE
Coward McCann, publishers, announce a forthcoming volume of their first Buck-and-a-Half novel—entitled "Sinners in Summer-time."

According to Floyd Dell (everybody knows who Floyd Dell is, or blushes for not knowing), the book is "an astonishing blend of Hans Christian Andersen and Henrik Ibsen."

A blend of that type, naturally would be "astonishing." And Hans Christian Andersen would be submerged, while Henrik Ibsen would be as all-pervading as a hunk of wop cheese in the family ice chest.

The Duchess, however, disagrees with me. She says she thinks the title, "Sinners in Summer-time," is delightfully provocative, and she's thinking of getting a copy.

And there you are!

What's the use of being clever and analytical and epigrammatic, with a woman like that around the place?

STILL THE GREAT MYSTERY

SENATORS WITH SUPERIOR ATTITUDE INCLINING TOWARD SECRET POLICIES ARE NOT SO PLENTIFUL THESE DAYS

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Unless the average citizen is willing to admit he is too much of a chump to be trusted with full information concerning his own affairs, lest he butt in mischievously, it is hard to understand how he can meekly accept the view of statesmen like Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania that the more secretly public business is transacted the better it is all around.

That most folk are boneheads, who ought to let the intelligent few run their government for them, interfered with, is real Hamiltonian doctrine, to be sure.

Perhaps it is correct, too. Nevertheless, would one expect the voters, so classified, to concur in such a contemptuous estimate of themselves in the present day and age? Once, maybe—in olden times, when "common people" were more modest than they are now. But in this generation? I wouldn't have supposed so.

In fact, I question if the pooh-pooh attitude still assumed toward politicians is a safe policy even for the David A. Reedian type of them, who have stuck to it thus far.

There are not so many of them as there used to be.

Reed is left, and Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, and Senators Arthur R. Gould of Maine and "Old Joe" Grundy of Pennsylvania, like Reed—but Gould is just retiring, and Grundy, as we know, was beaten for renomination in May.

In the next congress Reed and Bingham will be about the only survivors of the "truly superior" breed of senators.

There are others who are quite as ultra-conservative as Reed and Bingham, or Gould and Grundy. For example, Senators Smoot of Utah, Metcalf of Rhode Island, Mooses of New Hampshire, Phipps of Colorado. No one ever was more conservative than Senator Smoot.

Reed is more so than Senator Smoot. But these senators are not so exalted as Reed and Bingham. Though conservative, they put on no airs; a great gulf is not fixed between them and the polloi.

It must be conceded that Pennsylvania is not a commonwealth where popularity with the voters signifies as much as the primaries in the United States, undertaken to revive his understanding of America.

According to Ted, there ain't no hope for 'th' country. It's on its way to the demitition bows-ows. Constitutional government has abdicated, literature is practically dead and Big Business has turned all of us into "trudging asses."

When I was a kid and got in that frame of mind, Maw used to dose me with sulphur and molasses.

There's only one sovereign remedy for pessimism.

Yas'm!

AS IN RADISH.
Al Smith, speaking at a dinner the other evening made mention of the criticism that his pronunciation of the word "radio" had engendered. At first, he said, he felt pretty badly about it, and almost deserted "rad-io" for "rad-ee-o."

"But just in the nick of time," he laughed, along to my rescue came a professor of English at Harvard who assured me I was right and that the 'a' in 'radio' was pronounced like the 'a' in 'radish.' That made me feel pretty good, and I still pronounce it in the campaign way."

Ar! all good Democrats likewise call it "rad-io."

While all loyal Republicans say "rad-ee-o."

Next: "Dust on the Dining Room Table."

and on election days as in most states.

If a candidate is right with the organization, in Pennsylvania, presumably he wins, regardless of the electorate's ideas.

However, even Pennsylvania seems to be changing.

Senator George Wharton Pepper, who was Reed's Pennsylvania senate-mate for awhile, was as superior to a senator as Reed himself—but Pepper was beaten for renomination. And for this reason—"He was too superior," as a Keystone State congressman whispered into my ear at the time. There may have been other reasons, too, but that one was beginning to count even then—in 1926.

Only this spring Senator Old Joe Grundy likewise fell a victim to his superiority. True, he did get into the senate, but that was by appointment; not by popular acclaim. His superiority was of a different sort from Reed's or Pepper's, but it was of the thoroughly contemptuous sort—contemptuous of popularity.

And bingo! off he went on primary day.

In place of him, already nominated and with his election twice as good as cinched next November, we have one of the least superior candidates between the oceans—James J. Davis, our superlatively popular secretary of labor for two and a fraction presidential terms.

All of which seems to hint that superiority is not the asset that it was, even in Pennsylvania—that

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Care of Piano
A piano needs understanding care. It must not be placed in a sunny window or the rays will crack the finish. If the house is damp the piano should be kept closed when not in use and a small piece of charcoal laid inside the case. If there are moths about, a piece of camphor gum should be placed in the case. Traps should be set if there are mice in the house, for they are fond of nesting in the upright piano.

A piano requires tuning at least once in two or three months to keep it in good shape, often if it is in constant use. This for the good of the instrument as well as the human ear. In dusting the piano inside, the vacuum attachment may be run lightly over the wires and it will suck up all dust from the wires, hammers and webbing. In cleaning the keys, wring a soft flannel cloth out of toilet alcohol and rub them lightly, then polish with a bit of dry flannel. Do not wet the wooden portions of the keys. Fine furniture polish will keep the case clean and bright, used on a soft cloth and polished with a dry, soft cloth. In damp climate, or in rainy seasons, sometimes a "blow" or cloudiness forms over the case that the polish does not always remove, and we are forced to try other means. One effective remedy is to mix a half cup of clear turpentine with a cup of water and a half teaspoon of toilet alcohol. Go over the surface with this mixture on a soft cloth, then go over with a dry, soft cotton flannel cloth, or a new piece of soft chamois.

Safety Can

After the garbage can has served its purpose, do not throw it away, but make it serve as a receptacle outdoors for burning waste paper and dried leaves. This prevents it from scattering and serves as a protection.

Asparagus Stands Low In Calories

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

"How does asparagus stand in value as a food?" MISS I.
It stands high, Miss I., especially for those who want to reduce, because it is bulky and watery and contains very few calories. You can have a pound of it for 100 C. (That's about 20 medium sized stalks.) But, while it is low in calories, it is high in vitamin B, the anti-neurotic vitamin, and the green asparagus is relatively high in the growth and mucous membrane protecting vitamin A.

Asparagus also has mineral salts common to the other vegetables and like the other vegetables its salts are alkaline in their final reaction, so it is a basic food and thus helps to keep the normal slight alkalinity of the blood and tissue fluids, and helps to prevent an acidosis which may come from having too much of the acid-ash foods in the diet. In general, the acid-ash foods are flesh foods, cereals, eggs; while the alkaline ash foods are the fruits, vegetables, milk and nuts.

When fresh asparagus is not available, the canned is a very good substitute. The modern methods of canning cause very little loss of vitamins and mineral elements.

There is a volatile oil in asparagus which is absorbed and eliminated by the kidneys. You know of its presence, but it is not irritating, so don't be frightened. In fact, asparagus, being an alkaline food, helps keep the urine less acid.

Asparagus should be steamed rather than boiled; then none of its nutritive value is dissolved by the boiling water. And try the tender, fresh asparagus in salads. It is delicious. One should eat more of our vegetables raw. A lot of them that are usually cooked are nice raw, especially if grated.

I have read that 90 per cent of the United States asparagus supply is furnished by California, and it is the San Joaquin river delta with the Sacramento lowlands adjoining, that furnishes most of this 90 per cent. This delta is ideal for asparagus, as well as other vegetables, because of the deposits of vegetable matter and concentrated silt from the river into the water flowing from the Sierra across the great valley to the sea.

"What is sediment in the lungs?" Can it be cured? What causes it and will it or can it cause tuberculosis? MRS. E.

Workers in coal mines, stonemasons, drillers, sand etc., get more of the dust of these materials in their lungs. I presume that is what you mean by "sediment." It becomes incorporated into the tissues and once it is there, it is there for good, like tattooing. Methods are now being used to protect workers from inhaling these dusts.

Every person gets more or less of dust in his lungs, especially those who live in the city.

Yes, workers in dust of any kind do have their lung tissue resists lowered to tuberculosis and other lung infections such as pneumonia.

For those who are interested, we have an article on Tuberculosis, which gives a list of books written by authorities for the laymen.

Editor's Note: Requests for articles or pamphlets on hand must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope, plus the following small charge to help cover cost of printing and handling: for each article wanted, two cents; for each pamphlet, 10 cents; for each book, 25 cents. The pamphlets are Reducing and Gaining, Hygiene of Women, The Urinary System. Address: Dr. Peters Bureau, in care of this paper. Write legibly, and not over 200 words.

HERE'S A BIT of advice to discontented little girls from a contented one.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been a reader of your column for quite a while, and surely do enjoy it. I am not coming to you for advice this time, but lots of folks may think I need it rather badly. I live in the country and pride myself on being a good sport. I have the dearest parents on earth. Some of those little 16-year-old kids who think their parents hate them must remember that all parents must work so hard making a living for the kids that they have forgotten how to show their affections. Just you kids get sick once and see if the won't do anything in the world for you. Mine will.

"They are pretty strict, though. I have never had a date, but that was my fault as I made a promise to my parents two years ago that I would not go with boys until I was 16. I have many wonderful times as far as that goes.

"Tell George, Jr., I am going to develop into an attractive girl. I aim to save my lips for the man I can love, honor and obey. Hoping to see this letter in print to help some other little girls bear their troubles, and also wishing Miss Lee all the good luck in the world."

"LAUGHING BLUE EYES"
Thank you very much, dear, for your good advice and your good wishes. You see I did print most of it. George, Jr., seems to be getting a lot of attention, doesn't he?

"MISS VIRGINIA LEE: If you will permit me I would like to say a few words to your reader who is himself 'Not a Sissy, but a Real Fel' w.'

"Where do married men get the idea that every single girl that lays eyes on them is in love with them? You say, if there were no single girls there would be no unfaithful husbands, or in other words, there would be no sin in the world. There would be no sinners. I have also been a constant reader of Virginia Lee's column, and have read just as many articles where married men are making love to some other man's wife as I have read of single girls knocking married men down and dragging them by the hair to caves.

"I have not been in close contact with both married and single men in the business world for seven years without knowing some thing about them, for if you ever know a man's real self it is at his work."

"Thank you, Miss Lee."

"WINNIE WINKLE"

I think you are doing the "Real Fellow" an injustice, Winnie, by mistaking his attitude. And he wasn't married, as I remember. However, I agree with you that men and women are equally to blame in this philandering business, and that married men can't hide behind the skirts of the single girls and excuse their own shortcomings thus.

LONESOME SALLY: It does seem to me, Sally, that your boy friend is really undesirable. A boy who lies and accepts money from his girl friend and at the same time is not true to her, would hardly make a good husband. I would advise quitting him.

"MISS VIRGINIA LEE: If you will permit me I would like to say

The most artistic make-up in the world can be ruined by the use of the wrong shade of rouge. There are several suggestions that may profitably be borne in mind when the tint for the lips is selected. The present trend in make-up is toward naturalness. Always select the most normal colorings, and avoid deep purples, brilliant reds and mandarin shades. Your lipstick should blend with the shade of rouge you use. The light, yellowish reds are best, because they are the youthful tones, the reds of exuberant health. The dark, purplish shades are the tones which appear in an aging face, and should therefore be banned by any woman under fifty.

"Dear Miss Glad: My fingernails are very brittle, and break off continually. For this reason, I find it very difficult to make my hands appear well groomed. How can I strengthen my nails?"

"MRS. FERBER."

Dry, brittle nails that crack and break off easily should be bathed in warmed olive oil. Massage the oil into the base of the nails nightly. This treatment will not only alleviate the brittleness of the nails, but will also go away with the necessity of cutting cuticles, and will mitigate any ridges on the nails.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

"Dear Miss Glad: I have put into practice the instructions on make-up contained in your 'Beauty Culture' booklet and am glad to say that my appearance has improved immensely. However, there are some rules to be followed in choosing the shade of lipstick one should use? I can't seem to find a shade that locks natural on my lips.

DORA JAYNES."

PINCH HITTING

BY
R. A. H.

If any of these softball teams playing in the two Xenia leagues is anxious to learn something more about the game, it should post a spy in the bleachers during a contest.

The fans get more "kick" out of watching the local boys perform than they would from a big league game, because they like to kid the players and "raze" the umpires.

Herman Haller has been a first-class base umpire since he has been working the games this summer, and that's partly because he can take a lot of kidding from the bleacher bugs. Paul Turnbull also gets his share and Roy Marshall, who umpires back of the plate, is lucky because he's not near the bleachers, perhaps.

"Tiny" Smith, Bill Frayer, Joe Ary, Sheriff Tate and a lot of other fans got more fun out of advising the players from the seats than they do watching the game. In other words, if you play ball at Cox Field, you don't want to be too thin-skinned, or the fans will get your goat.

"Speck" Stiles had to take a lot of panning the other night in a game between the Critterions and the Lungs, when he was sunning himself in right field with a cigarette in his mouth and a cigar muffed a fly ball in his territory. Perhaps the best thing about the history of the sport in Xenia so far is that everybody takes the kidding in a spirit of fun and no ill-feeling has developed over the contests, no matter how hot the race.

The only dissension within the team itself and this has been slight.

Isadore Hyman, who occasionally cavorts for the Downtown Country Club and has had to stand for a lot of kidding because he's good-natured about it, may get a chance with the New York Giants if his playing improves a trifle. Jimmy McGraw has been looking for a Jewish star for years, largely because such a player would be a popular addition to a New York club, because of the fan interest. Of course the player must have more than his religion when he stays on McGraw's team, or he'll cause Jew to lose his.

Sammy Bohne, formerly with the Reds, is remembered by McGraw and Jimmy Reese of the Yanks as now causing Jew's heart to pump with envy because both of these chaps are Jewish. Already McGraw has tried three—Moe Solomon, Jake Levy and Andy Cohen, and all have failed. Solomon was an overgrown law who could do plenty of constructive things with a bat but was plenty destructive in the field.

They say Jake Levy had everything as a pitcher. He was young, ambitious, a little mountain of vigor and ever so clever. But it appears that Jake got all mixed up with himself somehow, and was dropped. Finally Andy Cohen made his appearance. Andy was an amiable sort and seemed to have more big league attitude than any of his predecessors. He was a rather dependable infielder and a rather reliable hitter. But McGraw gradually decided that since Cohen could not be dependable and reliable without being "rather" at the same time, he'd find somewhere else for the young man to cavort. After every opportunity Cohen flizzed and the quest for the great American ballplayer of Jewish ancestry, was on again. The result is the annexation of Harry Rosenberg, who comes from the Mission Club in the Pacific Coast League where he has been hitting .396 and taking good care of himself in the field. McGraw paid $25,000 and two players for Rosenberg and they say he is worth the price.

Arrangements for a two-year schedule agreement between De Pau University, Greencastle, Ind., Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind., and the five members of the Buckeye Athletic Association sets to rest rumors that a sixth Ohio team would be added to the circuit in place of Wittenberg, the dropped member.

The arrangement with the Indiana teams is said to foreshadow a new association, including either one or both of the Indiana teams in that event a new name would be chosen for the circuit and there is a possibility that an eighth member would be added. In that event Wittenberg would probably be invited to re-join.

MERCHANTS TO PLAY GRISMER FUEL TEAM

Manager Jess Chambliss will stack his Xenia Merchants up against the famous Grismer Fuels of Dayton next Sunday as the weekly baseball attraction at Washington Park, it is announced.

The announcement carries with it considerable interest to fans, because these self same Fuels have been just as hot as their name sounds when sporting themselves on the Xenia diamond and they proved their ability here two weeks ago by taking "Chambliss" pets into camp by a 6 to 2 score.

As a result of this condition, Jess is strengthening his team for the encounter Sunday, in the belief that these Dayton boys should not be allowed to get away with everything. Jess will spring a new pitcher on the Fuels Sunday and, so deep is the secret, that the new hurler's name is not yet revealed.

CADDIES DEFEAT COMPANY L IN AMERICAN LEAGUE GAME 17-12

The Country Club Caddies fattened their percentage at the expense of the Company L, National Guard team in an American League game at Cox Field Thursday evening, winning from the soldiers by a score of 17 to 12.

A vicious attack launched in the first, second, third and fourth innings gave the Caddies a winning margin and they sunk the soldiers handily for a birdie in the closing frames. The guardsmen were not exactly impotent at the plate and they began a sharpshooting campaign that clicked off one or more runs in every inning but two, but the run clusters were not large enough to overcome the fast-going club carriers.

SINGER ACCLAIMED LIGHT WEIGHT KING OVER SAM MANDELL

Champion Is Knocked Out In First By Challenger

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, July 18.—His arms outflung, his face distorted by his eyes staring up at the lights, Sammy Mandell lay stark upon the floor last night and was counted out of his world's lightweight championship in 1.45 of the first round. Stricken, he lay inert and unheeding, with the doleful count of ten sounding in ears that heard not and a referee's arm waving before eyes that could not see.

Over in a neutral corner stood the champion-to-be, Al Singer, of New York, chattering and gibbering with the hysteria of one to whom the fairy story of life has come true. He literally was chuckle-headed with disbelief at his own good fortune and, when the count reached ten, he leaped high in the air, his mouth working strangely and odd sounds issuing from his lips. He is not as graceful as Nijinsky nor as handsome as Barrymore.

But he is a good champion and he won as a good champion should—with the punch.

It was almost a Dempsey climax, this punch, a sort of one-shot bulls' eye that left the challenger clucking human. Zeigler that had been Sammy Mandell draped, all but lifeless, across the Axminster. Thrice more the stricken man was beaten down, and, at last, he lay there unconscious, never to rise again.

It took four knockdowns in less than two minutes to finish Mandell, first, because they come no gamier than Sam, and second because the flustered Singer had punched him self out and finally couldn't have dropped an empty night shirt with a monkey wrench.

He simply had nobody to lick after the first left hook had nailed Mandell on the chin for the original knockdown. To all practical purposes, the fight was over when Mandell arose, with drooping legs and dribbling lips, to face the young savage before him. Only a question of minutes you said, and then, abruptly, you changed the estimate to seconds.

The first punch had done it. The thing was re-creation of the moth and flame thesis. Too near for once and so out shot the licking, searing punch like a flame of light and it was all over.

Thus ended the career of a good champion and thus began that of another. The Bronx had returned its own to the seats of the mighty, where once the great Leonard sat and royally designed to receive his subjects, and so a crowd of 36,000 avid home-owners raised a paean of joy by way of acclaim for the home-town boy who had made good.

The fight bore out in all respects the representations that were proffered about Mandell before he entered the ring. They said he was through and never a truer word was spoken. Mandell was so far through last night that the 8 to 5 and 2 to 1 that was laid against him was bare faced skulduggery. He didn't have a chance. He probably never had a chance from the moment the match was made.

"Nobody who saw Mandell work on Sunday last could think he would win," said a ringsider after it was over. The writer, however, was given an even more illuminating view of the situation. He saw Mandell last night and it was enough.

He didn't see the old Mandell, a worthy champion who was so good against McLarnin two years ago that James hit himself on the back of the neck, trying to land a punch. The writer saw only a broken, inept champion, ready for the "kill."

FIFTY KILLED BY EARTHQUAKE

LONDON, July 18.—Fifty persons were reported killed and many houses destroyed after an earthquake shock took place in the Tharrawaddy district, sixty miles north of rangoon, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch.

The tremor disrupted communication and definite estimates on the death toll and property damage could not be obtained. Further damage in surrounding regions was feared.

MERCHANTS PLAN TO DISCUSS QUESTION

A general discussion of the power and light question in Xenia is planned for a dinner meeting of business men and others at the Iron Lantern Monday evening.

The fact that the Xenia Retail Merchants Association passed a resolution two months ago favoring the purchase of the transmission system of the Dayton Power and Light Co. in the city, is expected to be brought up at the meeting. This resolution was presented to city commission and placed on file at the time.

Dr. F. M. Chambliss, president of commission, is said to have asked the business men to get together and definitely inform the commission of its wishes in connection with the power and light question.

NEW YORK, July 18.—Horace Liveright is retiring from the book publishing business and will leave within a fortnight for Hollywood to become associated with Paramount studios. It was learned today, Liveright's book business will be continued by his former partners under the same name.

Tennis

HOW IT IS PLAYED

By WILLARD CROCKER
Canadian Davis Cup Star
Written for Central Press
No. 5.—STROKE EQUIPMENT

Review thoroughly your court areas into which you play your chosen shots. The next important step is to determine the stroke equipment necessary to meet the various moments of play. The big weapons of the game are the forehand and backhand drives. On the offensive attack, they pound against the opponent's defense and are the implements used to move him around to your desired end. They open up his court so you may finish your point. On the defense they are weapons which keep the ball consistently in play until you have weathered the storm and can turn again to the attack. The use of the forehand and backhand chop in attack and defense is at times necessary. It is an addition or accessory to the drive.

The use of pace, speed and spin of the ball in their proper place is highly desirable.

The next important implement in your kit is Service. It is the beginning of the utmost importance, for "Well begun is half done!" Put that ball in play and don't waste even one ball. Try to make both first and second services the same, using simple, standard delivery. Rely more on outguessing your opponent than beating him down. Put your ball in play and rely on the rest of your game to win the point. The net attack requires a good volley once you have reached the net. The essential is to know when to go to the net so it may be used to greatest advantage. The lob and "smash" of the job constitute complete equipment necessary for the success of the tennis player.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 18.—Speculative enthusiasm appeared on the wane, in generally light trading activity today, although interests committed to the advance were able to lead a new set of performers into the limelight, to offset the moderately reactionary tone evidenced elsewhere in the list.

Profit-taking on a growing scale seemed to be the order of the day, particularly in those issues which had already enjoyed spirited turns. Auburn, Vanadium, Simmons, National Cash Register and Radio-Keith, among the more prominent performers of late, succumbed in rather easy fashion to the insistent selling which continued to make its appearance.

Countering this, however, a further series of spectacular run-ups in Case Threshing, Radio, Auto-Stop, Safety Razor, Columbia Graphophone, International Harvester and Grigsby-Grunow, among others.

CLOSING QUOTATIONS

XENIA CHURCH WILL ENTERTAIN MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN 1931

The First United Presbyterian Church, Xenia, will entertain the Junior missionary society of Xenia Presbyterian at its annual rally in September, 1931. This was decided Thursday when the annual rally took place at the Second U. P. Church in Springfield.

One hundred and twelve children were in attendance. They represented congregations in Xenia, Dayton, Columbus, Springfield, Cedarville, Jamestown, Clifton, Reynoldsburg and other places included in the Presbyterian district.

Speakers for the day were the Rev. W. T. Mabon, pastor of the hostess church and Mrs. E. D. McCune of Bellefontaine, wife of a former pastor. Mrs. W. C. McCleary of New California, junior superintendent for the Presbyterian, was in charge of the rally and after the opening devotionals, a Miss Sarah J. Reid acted as chairman for the hostess church. A spelling match took place, which was won by Glendon Fox of the entertaining church. This served as an acquaintance maker for the young folks attending. Special music was rendered by the junior choir of the First U. P. Church, Springfield. The Rev. Mr. Mabon gave a talk on the subject, "God in Nature" at the morning session, and Mrs. McCune spoke on "Missionary Methods."

A short business meeting and devotionals took place at noon following a picnic luncheon, each society giving an account of its year's work. Memory work in the form of Bible quotations and missionary stories was given by delegates from the Jamestown church. In the afternoon, Mrs. McCune's subject was "A Trip Around the World." A feature of the afternoon meeting was a missionary playlet entitled, "How Our Dollars Came to Go as Missionaries" which was presented by young folks from the Second Church, Xenia. An instrumental duet was rendered by Glendon and Gail Fox of Springfield. The final event on the program was a playlet "America for Americans" presented by the Second Church, Springfield.

A banner for attendance and miles traveled to the rally was awarded to the delegation from the New California Church.

AWARDED JUDGMENT FOR AUTO ACCIDENT HERE; COURT NEWS

Charles A. Montgomery, N. Gal- loway St., Pennsylvania Railroad freight conductor was awarded a verdict for $66.99 by a jury in common pleas court Thursday in a $350 damage suit against Dr. F. E. Rosnagle of London. Nine of the jurors signed the verdict. The suit followed an automobile collision at Second and Detroit Sts. last December 29. Dr. Rosnagle's car was being driven east on Second St. and crashed in the Montgomery car which was traveling north on Detroit St. The Montgomery car was knocked against a boulevard light pole at the northeast corner breaking the light globe and bending the post. The car was badly damaged. It was alleged that the Rosnagle car failed to stop before crossing the intersection.

DEMOCRACY AND CHRISTIANITY

A distinguished statesman who participated in the Versailles peace negotiations and was familiar with every move in national affairs has said, "Education and moral development which makes the individual unwilling to bow to any human authority which he does not have a part in creating are essential to democracy."

Liberty, equality, fraternity, the essentials of democracy are the direct outcome of Christianity and there is a moral development that follows in the practical application of these essentials. The nations that are trying to put into effect democracy succeed or fail in proportion to the place Christianity has in the lives of its leaders.

America was well founded religiously and our success as a nation is due largely to Christianity. The place America shall take in the history yet to be made depends upon the place Christianity has in its leadership and citizenship. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Creamed Comments
On S.S. Lesson

The event narrated in this lesson occurred in the time of the judges of Israel, local rulers who were raised up to meet special situations and crises, often the invasion of a foreign country. Things must sometime get to their worst before regenerating forces are aroused to action, and it was in their darkest hour that a new light broke out in northern Israel.

V. 1. "And the children of Israel again did that which was evil in the sight of Jehovah." The evil thing which they did was the lapse into idolatry brought by intermarriage and social relations with their heathen neighbors.

V. 2. "And Jehovah sold them into the hand of Jabin, king of Canaan, that reigned in Hazor." The phrase, "sold them," implies abandonment as man is sold into slavery. The converse process is redemption.

V. 3. "And the children of Israel cried unto Jehovah." Sisters, the general of the enemies in battle had nine hundred chariots of iron and he had been oppressing the northern tribes for twenty years. It is very natural that people pray when in danger, such prayers represent cries of unstable, vacillating folk.

Vs. 4, 5. "Now Deborah, a prophetess, judged Israel at that time and the children of Israel came to her for judgment." Deborah, one of the twelve judges of Israel, was a prominent leader, because of the force of her character, a fine discriminating judgment, and an acute faculty of sight into the future; she learned of the suffering of Israel from the hearing of court trials over which she presided.

V. 6. "And she sent and called Barak and said unto him, hath not Jehovah the God of Israel, commanded saying, go draw unto Mt. Tabor, and take with thee ten thousand men of the children of Naphtali and of the children of Zebulun?" Deborah speaks as a prophetess, announcing God's commands, not her opinion; declaring God's promises, not merely her own hopes or wishes.

V. 7. "And I will draw unto thee, to the river Kishon, Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thy hand." The promise of God is enough to insure success then as well as now. When God draws near there is no danger for he will deliver.

V. 8. "And Barak said unto her, if thou wilt go with me, then I will go; but if thou wilt not go with me, I will not go." Barak longed for the association of one of God's elect, especially when encountering danger. Deborah's superior ability and leadership did not make Barak jealous; he did not refuse to serve under her because she was a woman.

V. 9. "And she said, I will surely go with thee; notwithstanding, the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honor; for Jehovah will sell Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah rose and went with Barak to Kadesh." The journey of ninety miles was hard, but leadership and place of power rather than serving God, for the victory Deborah said "shall not be for thine honor."

V. 10. "And Barak called Zebulun and Naphtali together to Kadesh. And there went up ten thousand men at his feet; and Deborah went with him. The beautiful harmony with which these two leading characters worked together was the chief secret of their success."

Discussion on Questions S.S. Lesson

1. How account for Deborah commanding a position of authority and power?

2. What changes in national and social progress may yet come because of the power of women?

3. What constitute the armies of wickedness in the United States and how may these armies be overthrown?

4. Why are the battles of peace not so enthusiastically supported as battles of war?

5. What lessons may we learn from Deborah?

6. What avenues of social service are opening to and inviting women?

Clericus says, "A sense of Jehovah's presence was the ground of the confidence of the Israelites. It kindled them into a glow of patriotism and armed them with power. However much confidence in God is manifest, nevertheless plans must be made on sound lines of good judgment."

Lesson prayer, "Forbid that we should be blind to organized forces of evil and succumb to them; give us a keen sense of the righteous" ness of God and stir us to fight valiantly the Lord's battles."

Home Education

STRENGTH BY USE

"Why is that heavy weight attached to the magnet?" inquired a young man of an electrician who was engaged in his laboratory.

"Because the magnet was losing its power lying around here without being used, and I am restoring its force by giving it something to do—more and more every day."

Here is stated a principle that applies to individual lives. Idleness results in the loss of power.

The boy that does not use his muscle lacks physical strength; the boy who does not breathe deeply, only filling the upper part of his lungs with oxygen, will have weak lungs because the entire lungs have not been used.

The value of an education is found in the mental strength that follows the use of the brain. It is not the education that is so valuable to a school boy or college chap as the strength of mind that results from the use of the faculties of the mind.

The same is true of the moral and religious life, only when conscience is used does it speak forcibly; those virtues of character—kindness, patience, goodwill, charity, purity, faith and love—will be found in action only when they have been used so well that they bound forth as water from a spring.

Substitute teachers ought to be given many of the same privileges given regular teachers; they ought to be invited to all business meetings and teachers' meetings to which the regular teachers are invited. They ought to be supplied with all the teachers' helps; in the lower grades, they may be made assistants, having some part in the program every Sunday; in the upper grades they may be given some special part in the program and often referred to as assistant teachers whose advice and Bible interpretation may be called for.

It is but fair that due notice be given them in plenty of time to make special preparation for teaching when they are wanted. It is a mistake to wait until the lesson period hour to call on the substitute teacher for his or her services.

Whenever a substitute teacher does teach, those in charge of the department should express appreciation of the special work done.

THE BETTER WAY

The following are the International Ideals of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ of America:

1. We believe that nations no less than individuals are subject to God's immutable moral laws.
2. We believe that nations achieve true welfare, greatness and honor only through just dealing and unselfish service.

PASSENGER, CREW TAKEN FROM BURNING VESSEL IN ATLANTIC

ship. The crew remained aboard the burning liner in an effort to extinguish the flames.

For several hours the crew of the Targis worked to save their vessel, wireless messages revealed, while the midnight sky was lit for miles around by flickering glare of the burning cargo.

When at length the blaze became hopelessly out of control, the captain of the Targis abandoned efforts to save his ship, and the crew took to the boats. They were taken aboard the Rangitoto which continued to stand by until the Targis, gutted by the flames from stem to stern, finally slipped beneath the waves.

The captain of the Rangitoto then reported to his head offices that the Targis had sunk, that the passengers and crew had been rescued safely, and that he was proceeding to Southampton immediately. The vessel is due at that port on July 24.

The terse and characteristic wireless reports from the master of the Rangitoto failed to reveal the cause of the Targis' blaze.

Both ships were equipped with wireless, but news of the Targis' difficulty was not received until hours after the fire had broken out in her hold, endangering the crew and the passenger who had shipped as supercargo.

While the freighter caught fire in a busy steamer lane, the Rangitoto apparently was the only vessel sufficiently near to respond to her frantic appeals for assistance.

When the British vessel reached the scene the fire had gained such headway that there appeared little hope of saving the Targis, but the crew, true to the traditions of the sea, refused to give up the ship until every last chance of saving her had been exhausted.

The Targis, which plies with freight between the United States and Germany, was journeying eastward when the fire broke out. She was due at her home port of Bremen July 27.

The identity of the Targis' single passenger was not known here. First reports stated that between fourteen and eighteen persons over and above the crews were aboard the vessel, and it was reported that one of them was an American. Efforts to confirm this report were futile.

The meager messages from the captain of the Rangitoto gave no intimation of the dramatic scene which must have transpired when the crew exhausted and smoke-grimed from their heroic battle with the flames gave up their ship and launched small boats on the turbulent ocean to board the Rangitoto.

From the captain's messages, it appeared no difficulty was encountered in launching lifeboats and rescuing the crew. Shipping authorities here paid tribute to the quick action of the Rangitoto's master in reaching the scene and aiding in getting the situation so well in hand that the mid-ocean blaze took no toll of life.

The successful rescue work was made possible, it is believed, by the fact calm weather prevailed at the time of the disaster. The blaze from the Targis' hold, illuminating the ocean in a wide red swath of light made easier the task of rescue workers.

Messages from the Rangitoto's captain indicated the crew of the Targis remained absolutely calm and possessed, and voluntarily passed up the chance of rescue until all hope of saving their vessel had passed.

No estimate was obtainable here of the financial loss which was sustained in the sinking of the Targis and destruction of her cargo.

REVOLUTION TRAIL MARKER CONTRACT AWARDED THURSDAY

private organizations are financing the erection of similar markers along the trail designating other points of interest or places of local interest which the state does not feel obliged to mark. For this reason Dr. Galloway is hoping for local assistance in installing plaques giving more detailed information at the place where the state marker is placed at Old Town.

It is Dr. Galloway's proposal that two markers be hung on each side of the door of the Old Town school, indicating the many historical events that transpired there during the pioneer days of Greene County. He has also suggested that the D. A. R. boulder may be made a part of this grouping of historical markings, while the state marker at the roadside would call attention of the public to the historical significance of the spot.

Markers pointing out other historical places in this section could be erected gradually later if the central marking group is established now, he points out. The Sewah Studios is making a special price for these separate markers if the order is carried through the factory at the same time that the state markers are made.

The state markers will be placed along the trail by the state highway department, and will probably be finished by September 15, in the belief of Mr. Hawes. Although the Greene County Historical Society operates without a treasury, it may be able to assist in financing the added markers through individual donations of members, and civic and luncheon clubs may be asked also to support the proposal.

Mr. Kinney, travelling freight agent of the Logansport division, who was born at Fairfield and J. P. Willis, Columbus, who was a passenger conductor out of Xenia many years, are among eighty-seven employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad who were retired from active duty July 1 under the pension plan, had placed on the roll of honor.

Mr. Kinney was born July 12, 1860. He received his education at Yellow Springs and Versailles, O., and was first employed with the Logansport division as station clerk at Ridgeville, Ind., March 1, 1889. After working for fifteen months he retired, but re-entered the service July 1, 1904 as traveling freight agent, and remained in that capacity during the rest of his active service which totaled twenty-six years. His home is at Muncie, Ind., where he is a member of the Christian Church, and the Masonic lodge.

Mr. Willis is better known to local railroad men and their families because of his long service on the Cincinnati division as passenger conductor. He was born June 22, 1860 and entered the services as a freight brakeman December 2, 1889. He became a conductor July 11, 1890. He was transferred to the Springfield local freight run and extra passenger out of Xenia March 16, 1917 and became a regular passenger conductor at Xenia March 8, 1918. His total service reached forty years and six months.

Mr. Willis says he hesitated to leave an ammunition factory to become a railroad, because of the danger in the latter occupation, but is now thoroughly convinced to the safety of modern railroading.

He lives at 897 S. 22nd St., Columbus.

The Theater

Everyone must be sitting around out in Hollywood wondering what Howard Hughes is going to do next. Hughes, you know, is the wealthy young man who spent $4,000,000 and two years making "Hell's Angels" and now is going in the color picture business.

The latest on Hughes is that he has just bought the motion picture rights to "Queer People," the ruelist satire yet written on Hollywood. The two young authors of this book dipped their pens in hall and have turned out what many believe to be an unfair, biased picture of the film colony.

Satire is a different thing to express on the screen and whether

ROLAND WEST

Hughes can make a satisfactory alk of the story, is not known. He also owns film rights to "The Front Page" is expected to reduce it, although that would be another difficult task for movie audience consumption.

"The Front Page" is a newspaper story laid in the press room of the criminal courts building in Chicago and with reporters as its principal characters.

It is not an immoral play, but as lines are so true to life, and the language of the reporters so picturesque, that there are many opportunities to offend the sensitive. As a Broadway legitimate play, it was accepted, but it is difficult to see how Hughes expects to get it past the censors unless he should change the play by changing the lines.

Remember Raymond McKee, who used to be a well known actor in the silent pictures? He's turned out to be quite versatile. First he started a craze for "chicken tracks" with his "Zulu Hut." Later, he's become a song-writer and has written the words and music to a hit, "Caribbean Sea." McKee used to play villain roles in the movies.

Universal's "All Quiet on the Western Front," has meant a great deal to the boys who contributed such fine performances as the doomed German soldiers.

William Bakewell is the latest to get a good part. He has been signed by United Artists to play the juvenile in "The Bat Whispers," which Roland West will direct. Chester Morris, whom West discovered and made famous in "Alibi" will play the romantic lead in the piece.

Did you know that Grant Withers used to be a locomotive fireman? Withers, it will be remembered, is the huge and handsome young man who eloped with Loretta Young in the wake of a divorce from his first wife and caused a lot of commotion that has since died down.
